SECRET PLEDGES ALARM MR. STEWART.

HE WILL MEET LIVINGSTON,

And Discuss Public Issues on the Stump.

SOME VIEWS FROM BLAINE. In Which He Dissents From His Party Friends.

WASHINGTON, June 12 .- [Special.]-Judge Stewart reached here this morning. He says he feels quite confident of being re-elected over Colonel Livingston. The only way Colonel Livingston can defeat him, he says, will be by secret pledges of alliancemen in their various lodges, and he does not believe intelligent tarmers will allow themselves to be voted like

Judge Stewart mailed a letter to Colonel Livingston tonight, in which he accepted his Invitation to stump the district together. He, however, says he will have to remain here until the compound lard and the national election law bills are disposed of. Therefore he does not think he can return to Georgia in less than ten days or two weeks, and in the meantime he hopes Colonel Livingston will hold off. He thinks that they can get better hearlngs from the farmers in two weeks than now, as in that time they will have "laid by" their

MR. BLAINE DISSENTS. Mr. Blaine had a long conference this after on, with one of the leaders of the republican side of the senate, on the subject of pending legislation. From what he said, it is evident the views of the man from Maine are in conflict with the policy of the republican party leaders in the house. Indeed, Mr. Blaine did not hesitate to say that the republican party was adopting a course which was all wrong, and that if carried out, would result in an averwhelming defeat for his party. In the first place, Mr. Blaine said he could not understand what had influenced the gentlemen who prepared the tariff bill, which recently passed the house, to give a bounty of two cents a pound on sugar.

"What are we going to pay it with?" he

He thought it a great mistake. The cotton-planters of the south, he said, had just as much right to demand and get a bounty on their cotton crop. The sugar-planters are now making more money than the cotton-planters, and would make even more with sugar on the free-list. If this is given, other bounties will, of necessity, follow. He thought it is not in ac-cordance with the provisions of the constitu-tion, and should not be done. "It is almost as bad," he said, "as this ware-house bill, which the farmers are demanding. It does seem that the people of the country now, expect the government to do everything for them, and this sentiment ought to be nipped in the bud.

"Why," said the great statesman, "I cannot understand what is coming over our men in the house. They certainly are acting without either conservatism or thought. Again he said the republicans were making a great mistake in drifting into partisan legislation. To adopt a force bill would destroy the progress of a large section of the country without benefiting the republican party. "I hope," he said, "that these measures will not go through the senate. They will injure more than benefit our party."

MB. MILLS DECLINES. Mr. Mills, of Texas, today resigned the position on the committee on rules to which he was appointed yesterday, and the speaker appointed Mr. McMillin, of Tennessee.

As Reed would not appoint him to the first vacancy, caused by the death of Mr. Randall. Mr. Mills simply refused to take any place on the committee. Again, as 'Mr. McMillin is his intimate friend and associate on the ways and means committee, and as Mr. |McMillni will be a candidate for speaker of the next democratic house, Mr. Mills wanted to give this boom for the place, believing the position on rules would help him in his race.

USING THE VETO. President Harrison has begun to use his veto pen very freely on southern public building bills. He today vetoes the Tuscaloosa bill appropriating $40,000 for a building at that riving Alabama town, and he will continue to veto bills for southern democratic towns, while the northern republican bills will probably be allowed to slip through

When the agricultural appropriation bill was under consideration in the house today, an effort was made to adopt an amendment to have the agricultural department to distribute the seeds to be given away. It was, however, voted down, and the members will continue to send out seed to their favored constituents. Now is the time for all who want them for next season to put in their orders with the

MRS. HARRISON'S COTTAGE. Mrs. Harrison, Mrs. McKee and Baby Mc-Kee, will go to Cape May Tuesday, to spend er in the cottage recently presented to Mrs. Harrison by some "unknown" Phila-delphians. The president will go over each selphians. The president was Saturday evening and spend Sunday.

SENATORS AND THE SILVER BILL.

A Discussion of the Senate Bill by Messrs Washington, June 12.—Mr. Edmunds offered a resolution (which went over until tomorrow) appointing Edward K. Vale

June 30, 1890. The remonstrances of importers of Havana zigars against schedule F, of the McKinley bill, and of the Patrons of Husbandry against free hides, were presented and referred to the inance committee lergeant-at-arms of the senate, to take office

Among the bills reported from the commites and placed on the calendar were two ser ate bills to amend the polygamy laws.

CHANGES IN THE PENSION BILL.
Mr. Davis presented the conference report on the dependent pension bill. In reply to questions by different senators, Mr. Davis said that as to dependent parents, all the change made by the bill from the existing law saw, that, whereas the existing law required dependency to exist at the time of a soldier's death, the pending measure merely required ath, the pending measure merely required pendency at the time of the application, so that his present estimate of the probable st of the bill was $41,000,000 or $42,000,000 annually, instead of $36,000,000, when the bill was first before the senate. A further conference, he thought, would be useless.

The report went over and was ordered printed, with the bill as agreed to by the conference.

SENATOR EVARTS ON SILVER. The senate silver bill was then taken up and The senate silver bill was then taken up and Mr. Evarts addressed the senate. He said the diverse action of the house and senate had narrowed the question substantially to the free coinage of silver—the opening of the mints of the United States to the bullion of the world—a step of much gravity, and which would have wide consequences, whether of good or evil; a step not easily evaded and almost irretrievable. With a difference in ratios (15) in Europe and 16 in this country) that measure would be utterly impracticable, especially if it was desired also to cause the opening of mints abroad to silver. The proposition to receive silver bullion over the

the opening of mints abroad to silver. The proposition to receive silver bullion over the counter of the treasury, and to pay for it in certificates, leaving the transaction at the will of the owner of the bullion had never approved itself to his judgment. He regarded it as being a step backward. Money could never be safely treated as a commodity. It was not to be treated as anything but the force and propulsion of circulation.

A PLEA FOR THE FARMER.

Mr. Vance next addressed the senate. He

Mr. Vance next addressed the senate. He did not remember, since he had been in the senate, any questien that had been so ably and thoroughly discussed, or that was of higher importance to the people than that now under consideration. Nothing was better established. he said, than the fact of the necessity of more he said, than the fact of the necessity of more money for the progress and prosperity of the country. The wealth of the world had increased ten-fold, while the output of precious metals had kept pace neither with the growth of wealth nor of population. In consequence of this deficient circulation, the prices of all products were lower than they ever had been before—although the prices of wages had kept up owing to labor unions and other causes. Those who had suffered most from the depreciation of silver were the agricultural classes of the country. The farmers were so indebted that, if there was no aid given in the wew of inor siver were the agreement classes of the country. The farmers were so indebted that, if there was no aid given in the way of increasing the circulation, a large proportion of them were doomed to bankruptcy and ruin. The tariff law had contributed largely to the impoverishment of the farmers by its operating in the restriction of the foreign market. The insanest problem ever produced was the convision of means the convision of the property by ting in the restriction of the foreign market. The insanest problem ever produced was the curtailing of money by demonetizing silver at a time when the wealth of the business of the world had increased tenfold. In order that there might be no misapprehension as to his position, and that no one should ask on which side of the question he was, he desired to state that he favored the unshould ask on which side of the question he was, he desired to state that he favored the unlimited coinage of silver money, and the restoration of silver as it was before it was demonetized. He believed that it was only a question of courage, and that if the United States made a beginning in opening the door to the unlimited coinage of silver, the commercial countries of the world would follow the example. All classes of the community desired it. The agriculturists desired it, and as seven-eights of the foreign commerce of the country was the product of the field and farm, why should not their voice be heard in the matter? There never has been a greater crime perpetrated against the American people by legislation (and that was saying a great deal, for he had known some infamous crimes of legislation) than robbing them of the value of their silver money.

SENATOE MORGAN FOR FREE COINAGE.

Mr. Morgan next addressed the senate, par-

Mr. Morgan next addressed the senate, particularly in reference to the amendments reported by the finance committee.
His position on the subject of the free coinage of silver needed, he said, no definition. The very first address which he had made in the senate had been in favor of that proposition, and he had had no favor of that proposition, and he had had no occasion since then to change his attitude on that subject. He had felt then, and still felf, that he was obliged, as a senator, to furnish to the people of the United States coins of gold and coins of silver, without discrimination between the two He did not claim to know much about commerce, but it appeared to him that if the United States should take the lead in this matter and restore silver as a money metal, commerce would be stimulated, more abundant crops would be produced, more abundant fabrics turned out in the factories, and there would be an increased activity in the exchange of these products and commodities.

Without concluding his remarks Mr. Morgan yielded to the motion to adjourn.

The Conference Report Rejected by the

ANOTHER CONFERENCE. Mr. Stewart then moved a further conference with instructions to the house conferees to recede from the house amendment. His amendment provides that every contract or agreement entered into for the purpose of pre-venting the sale or purchase of any com-modity, transported from one state or territory to be sold in another, or so contracted to be sold, or to prevent competition in the transporsold, or to prevent control that the transportation of persons or property from one state or territory into another, shall be deemed unlawful within the meaning of this act, provided that contracts here enumerated shall not be construed to exclude any other contract or agreement declared unlawful in this act. As agreed to in conference, this amendment was nade to read: Every contract or agreement entered into for the purpose of preventing competition in the transportation of persons or property from one state or territory into another, so that the rates of such transportation may be raised above what is just and reasonable, shall be declared unlawful within the meaning of this act. Nothing in this act shall be deemed or held to impair the powers of several states in respect to any of the matter in this act mentioned.

Mr. Stewart demanded the previous question on his motion. Agreed to—yeas, 111; nays, 97.

Mr. Henderson, of Indiana, from the committee on appropriations, reported the urgent deficiency bill appropriating $3,708,000 for the payment of pensions, and $3,075,000 for the expenses of the eleventh census. Passed.

The conference report on the pension appropriation bill was presented. The report, which is a disagreeing one, was adopted, and a further conference was ordered.

The AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATIONS.

The house then, in committee of the whole, briefly considered the agricultural appropriation bill, reported it back to the house without amendment and passed it.

Mr. Funston made a brief explanation of the details of the bill, saying that the committee had had economy in view at every stage. There was no general debate upon it.

The house, at 5 o'clock, took a recess until 8 o'clock, the evening session to be for the consideration of bills reported from the committee on commerce.

At the evening session only four or five local bills chiefly for the astablishment of light-

That we protest emphatically against any law that will in terms or by implication permit wool to be imported in any other than in its natural condition as shorn from sheep, except as washed or scoured in unbroken fleeces.

Another resolution was adopted deprecating decimation of ewe flocks west of the Mississippi by killing them for market instead of holding them for breeders. Present officers were re-elected. The convention meets next year in Kansas.

DOWD WILL BE THE MAN. Political Maneuvering in the Sixth North

CHARLOTTE, N. C., June 12.—[Special.]—While it is true that the sixth congressional district of this state can have only one representative in congress, its local strife has spread all over the state and fired the farmers up to all over the state and fired the farmers up to fover heat. Now that the doubt about Colonel Ham C. Jones's candidacy is dispelled by his card in the daily paper owned by a corporation of which he is president, political wiseacres have decided that Jones has not a ghost of a chance, that S. B. Alexander, the allianceman who carried Cabarrus county a few days ago, as reported in THE CONSTITUTION, is a sure and safe one to bet on. This was the prevailing opinion up to today, but, with a cunning known only to shrewd partisans, a dark horse has been stabling near the track. It now appears that Alexander is a blind, simply out to test the strength of the farmers against the lawyers in the primary contest. It is well known that the state clique will not aid Alexander, and to prevent objections standing against the real candidate, he is held in the background until the day of compromise arrived. A knowing politician today gave The Constitution correspondent the true inwardness of the whole thing. The democrat candidate in this district will not be Hon. Alf Rowland, the present representative, but Hon. Clement Dowd, ex-member of confever heat. Now that the doubt about Colonel

THE INDIANS ARE HUNGRY

And Are Causing Trouble in Montana

Troops Sent to the Scene.

CHICAGO, June 12.—A dispatch from St.
Paul, regarding the Indian excitement in Montana, says: General Ruger, commander of the department of Dakota, has advices from Tongua river Crate and Kooch that the In-Tongue river, Custer and Keogh, that the Indians are in an excited Trame of mind over a shortage of subsistence and that alarm exists among the settlers, but that he has no information of an uprising, and does not believe in the number of murders reported. There are now four companies of cavalry at Tongue river, in command of Major Carroll, and three companies of infantry from Fort Keogh are on their way to the same spot, due to arrive Friday. There were nine hundred Cheyennes on the reservation and about 2,000 Crows on the adjoining reservation, and there had been frequent taunts made that the Indians would soon be cleared off. The result has been to keep the Indians and settlers at dagger's points and to foment any trivial difficulty.

A SUFFICIENT FORCE ON THE GROUND. "There is no doubt," said the general, "that the military on ground is easily able to cope with the Indians in case of an uprising which, however, I do not anticipate. The June round-up among the cattlemen is due and the arms sent by Governor Toole may be for their protection. It is possible that developments have occurred since my last advices." COWBOYS AFTER THE REDS.

A dispatch from Billings, Mont., says: The first man to be killed by the Cheyennes is the mayor at Tongue River agency. The Indians are now killing cattle by the hundreds. Yesterday forty head were found killed on Pumpkin terday forty head were found killed on Pumpkin creek. Four companies of infantry and one troop of cavalry left Fort Keogh for the scene of treuble.

Men just in from Rosebud county report three ranch properties burned by the Indians and other houses shot into, but no people killed. A posse of cowboys left Rosebud last evening, and said they would drive the Indians back on the reservation without regard to troops. The Indians camped only eighteen miles from the station on Rosebud river. The cowboys, engaged in rounding up, are expected down the river tomorrow, and the posse which left Rosebud expect to be joined by them near where the Indians are now camped.

tributed in Asheville, N. C., calling upon the people to resist the intrusion upon their private affairs, contemplated by the census schedules. The circular further says:

That a stranger to your family, under pay, and by order of the impertinent and insulting authorities at Washington, will present himself at your house and ask questions that would cause any modest woman to blush with shame and indignation, and every man to feel that his home and family had been put to uncalled for insult and humiliation.

Superintendent Porter paid no attention to the annonymous circular, which he supposed was merely the production of some crank until a letter was received from Supervisor Hardwick, dated June 9th, in which he states that his enumerators in Asheville are having some trouble by the people evading them. He states that they often send a servant to the door, saying: "There is no one here who can give in the census."

The supervisor asks for instructions. Sup-

ing: "There is no one here who can give in the census."

The supervisor asks for instructions. Superintendent Porter today wrote letters to Senator Vance and Representative Ewart, calling their attention to the condition of affairs in Asheville, as reported by the supervisor. He states that he knows of no reason for the people of Asheville to adopt such a course in relation to the census. As far as possible competent men had been appointed as supervisors and enumerators, and in no case has the appointment of an enumerator been refused because he was a democrat. He asks that they use their influence with the people of Asheville to induce them to take a different view of the matter.

A BAD CENSUS MAN.

ENUMERATOR WILSON KILLS JESSE

AT WHOSE HOUSE HE HAD CALLED

To Take Census Statistics—An Old Quarrel Was Renewed and Wilson Cut Inman's Throat.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., June 12 .- A Quincy special to the Times-Union says: News reached here late tonight of the murder of Jesse Inman, by William C. Wilson, at the home of the former in the country, sixteen miles west from town. The men were neigh-bors and there had been bad blood between them for some time. Wilson is a census enu-merator. Today he called at Inman's house In the course of conversation the old troubles came up, when Wilson accused the Inmans of stealing a hog from him. Inman and his brother thereupon attacked Wilson, one with a knife and the other with a club. As soon as Wilson was struck, he drew his knife and rushed at Jesse Inman, and slashed his neck

Inman died almost instantly, and Wilson fled and has not been captured. All concerned are respectable white farmers. There is great excitement here, and at daylight a sheriff's posse will probably go in search of Wilson. SUICIDE OF A CAPTAIN

Who Had Used Up the Money Raised by

Greenville, S. C., June 10.—[Special.]

Isaac Epton committed suicide this morning by shooting himself through the head with a pistol, at his home, near Dacusville, Pickens county, S. C. Mr. Epton, it seems, mortgaged some land in which he owned only a small interest, and forged his brother's name for its full value. The mortgage was about due, and the holder had learned of Epton's crime and sent on two constables to arrest him. As the constables came near his house, they heard the pistol shot, and on entering found him dead. Mr. Epton was a young man of good habits, and well thought of by everyone, and the news of his crime and sad ending was a great shock to everyone. He leaves a wife to whom he was married about a year ago. He was at the time of his death captain of the Dacusville Guards. It is learned that he had in some way gotten possession of a fund his company had made up to go to Richmond to the unveil#### ing of the Lee statue, and had appropriated it, thereby preventing them from going.

FIRING THE BARNS. The Farmers of a Tennessee Community

NASHVILLE, Tenn., June 12.—[Special.]— The farmers, in a number of middle Tennes see counties, have lost thousands of dollars in the past few months from barn-burners. The fire fiends have been especially active in Giles and Lincoln counties, and, notwithstanding several arrests and one lynching, scarcely a week passes without a fire. Last night Orville Rutledge, living near Fayetteville, in Lincoln county, saw a man set fire to his barn. He fired at him twice, and then attempted to save his barn, but without success, as it was destroyed, causing a loss of several hundred dollars. The farmers in the neighborhood are greatly excited, as this is the ninth large barn burned in Lincoln county recently.

He was able to call for help, and his assailants, hear able to call for nelp, and his assairants, hearing assistance coming, ran away. The men were not recognized, but it is probable that they are members of a regularly organized band of thieves, which the police here, so far, have been unable to locate. Mr. Goldbach is seriously, though not dangerously, hurt.

The Poor Wheat Crop. RALEIGH, N. C., June 12.—[Special.]—A report made today by the agricultural department states that many of the farmers of Chatham have finished harvesting their wheat. It was, on many farms, not worth cutting, while all declare it is the poorest wheat crop ever known. In some fields the yield was not as much as sowed. As wheat is one of the chief products of Chatham, the failure of the crop is a very serious calamity.

Chicago, June 12.—The Times asserts that the world's fair directors have practically decided to locate the exposition on the lake front. An organized effort has been made, it says, to clear the lake front of all its objectionable features by coming to a definite understanding with the Himois Central railroad, and that with this end in view all projects, so far as the site is concerned, have been left in abeyance.

A BIG THING.

The Southern Building and Loan Association Established in Atlanta.

Mr. H. Ernest Murphey, special agent for the southern Building and Loan association, of Huntsville, Ala., is in Atlanta.

Mr. Murphey is well known throughout the south as a railroad man, and the purpose of his visit to Atlanta is in connection with the affairs of the association he represents.

He expresses greatest enthusiasm and encouragement over the past record of the association in Atlanta, and thinks it is destined to become one of the greatest financial institu-tions in Georgia. He is a firm believer in the advantages of building and loan associa-tions, and remarked yesterday that the establishment of this local board of the southern more than a year ago marked an era southern more than a year ago marked an era in the city's history.

"We have a large membership here," said he, "and this branch is virtually a local concern entirely. The association is the oldest and strongest in the south, and the last annual statement attests its merits in a manner that commends it to the business men of Atlanta.

"Our local board here consists of Messrs. W. A. Hansell, president; J. H. Ketner, treasurer; B. H. Austin, secretary; H. J. and T. A. Hammond, attorneys; G. H. Tanner and James S. Cook, directors; and as all local business is done through this board, I commend it to the people of Atlanta."

Which Clears Hale of Any Crime—Says Hale Brother-in-Law Was Insane.

Montreal, June 12.—Eugene H. Cowles, of Cleveland, who was shot by his brother-in-law, C. C. Hale, made a statement today which practically clears Hale. In the course of his deposition he says:

"I stated to Hale and my wife several times that any one interfering to deprive me of my child would be shot by me if I did not get the protection of court in time. The threats I made were against any one who would try to deprive me of my child illegally. I acted all through upon legal advice from Cleveland and Toronto, and never overstepped the bounds of law. I cannot charge, and will not accuse, my brother-in-law with shooting me with intent to do me any harm. I believe that he was momentarily out of his mind, having been brought up to that state by the sufferings of my wife, and that she suggested this to him, because I believe them both incapable of doing an evil act and more especially of doing me any harm."

The Tariff Tinkers. WASHINGTON, June 12.—Owing to the interest in the silver debate this afternoon, there was no meeting of the republican sub-com-tee. congress, including the senate, there are only ten members (none of whom are from Georgia) who represent in person the agricultural interests; and, believing that this discrimination against the former is unfair and undemocratic; and believing further that the failure of congress to bring about the needed reform in existing tariff rates, and neglect of other legislation just to the farming interests, which have caused the present depressed condition of agriculture, are due to the temporizing policy of politicians not in sympathy with the needs of the farmer; we therefore believe that this district should have direct representation in concress from the farmer, ranks as a just Milner was recommended for the legislature, after so much strife among some of the brethren, it is but natural to look some of the brethren, it is but natural to look for a bitter contest over this office. Colonel W. E. H. Searcy, who was first nominated by that meeting, and an abler, more honest, or more honorable gentleman could not have been mentioned for the honor—stated positively he could not accept it. Mr. Milner, who was forced over his protest, to accept the nomination, does not want it, and says he is too old to enter politics. But there are some who do not want legislative honors, and that's why it's going to be interesting. Hon. John H. Mitchell would like to return to the house, and would no doubt like to return to the house, and would no doubt have done so, but for the activity of Mr. B. N. Barrow in opposing his nomination by the alliance meeting which put Mr. Milner in the field. Mr. Barrow desired the nomination, and the cross firing of these two gentlemen at this meeting relative to the official acts of the one in the legislature and the other as manager of the oil mill is said to have been interesting indeed. Each one thinks a word from Colonel Searcy on his declination, in their favor, would have meant his victory. But Colonel Searcy, in his manly and open way, desired the democracy to say who was entitled to the honor and not himself.

Mr., Barrow is so "out of time" with the totion of that meeting that he has said openly if a younger man than Mr. Milner was put in the field he would use his influence for him. The measure of his strength is unknown to The Constitution. have done so, but for the activity of Mr. B. N

Soon afterward I asked Mr. Rogers whether I should report him as an avowed candidate, and he replied: "You can do as you like," and I inferred from his manner that he may be considered in the race. Messrs Middlebrook and Rogers are lawyers, Mr. Anderson is editor of the Covington Star and the other persons mentioned are farmers. THE THREE MEN SUSPECTED OF AS Trying Moment.

LAWRENCEVILLE, Ga., June 12 .- [Special.] Today, the lives of the three Johns, lodged in jail under the the charge of rape upon Mrs. Taylor, are as safe in Gwinnett county as in their own rude huts on the Savannah river. THE WITNESSES COME.

E. U. Hawks, white, Tom Jones, a big, black, honest-faced negro man, and Mahala Kelly, a negro woman, furnished this morning the evidence of their innocence and their identification of them was complete, sudden and satisfactory, and threw open the iron doors that se-cured them from an outraged people suspecting their guilt.

Mr. Hawks was first carried to Mr. Brand's office, where he, the sheriff and others held a conference with him. A large number of citizens then went with the Elberton party, the sheriff and Mr. Spence to the jail, to witness the most important feature bearing upon their

THE TRYING MOMENT.

It was a trying ordeal for the accused, and the two men and one woman upon whose statements hung the destinies of these human beings. They were arranged in front of the great iron doors of the jail. Mr. Cosby brought out one at a time. A large crowd of determined but cool citizens from the town and country stood as if around a grave, and the suspense in bringing John Pitts out, whose fate was first to be sealed, was intense. He came in sight, not knowing whether he was gaining his freedom or going to his grave.

MAMATA WELLY SPEAKS No sooner did Tom Jones and Mahala Kelly ee him than they each said: "That's John Pitts."

Mr. Hawks answered-involuntarily-"Yes, that's Pitts." A more grateful and happy expression never come nearly two hundred miles from home to lit up a negro's face before than when John saw his boss and his negro friends, who had identify him, and thereby corroborate his ents as to his whereabouts on May 29th. John Neal was then brought out, and fully identified, and then John Williams, and the trial of identification was over, and there were no three happier negroes in the universe than they. Their faces glowed with gladness, as their white and black friends stood there and sang out their respective names. Old Tom turned away in tears as his imprisoned friends tramped back to their cells. They were carried there until the discharge papers could be prepared, but Tom did not know it. THE FATEFUL MOMENT.

They say when the train was stopped Monday, they thought their time had come, and that they would have fallen on their knees in prayer, but their chains prevented. They say they expected to have been shot to death without a chance to prove their innocence. It is true their faces, necks and hands were covered with great drops of perspiration, and their intense agony and suspense must have been terrible, but the crowd that would have hastened them to a speedy death if they were the guilty parties, are not slow to return them their liberty.

Another clue is ended, and the terrible unparalleled treatment of poor, defenseless Mrs. Taylor is still shrouded in mystery.

IMPERILED BY A RUNAWAY HORSE. Several Men Narrowly Escape a Fateful

HARMONY GROVE, Ga., June 12.-[Special.]-A very serious accident to several of our citizens came very near happening yesterday morning. Dr. Will Hardman's horse took fright at something and broke loose from the hitching-post and dashed off down the street, with buggy attached. On reaching the store of T. E. Key & Co., the horse attempted to go between the post, which supports a wooden awning in front of the store, and a shade tree. The buggy became fastened between the post and tree, and the horse, in his efforts to get loose, pulled the post down, thereby precipi tating the entire wooden awning to the ground. Messrs. T. E. Key, John D. Barnett, W. B. Barnett and Jere Strickland were sitting beneath the awning when it fell, and only escaped death by beating a very hasty retreat. All escaped without injury, except Mr. W. B. Barnett, whose head and legs were consider ably bruised up by the falling timbers.

Cody and took his pants, searched them and then threw them in the yard. They also entered the bed-room of Mr. J. P. Swain and carried off his vest and pants that he wore every day. In his pants were the store keys of Mr. W. C. English for whom Mr. Swain keeps books. Fortunately they threw the keys away with English for whom Mr. Swain keeps books. ### A PECULIAR FISH

Which Has Been Presented to the Public Liwhich Has Been Presented to the Public Library of Quitman.

QUITMAN, Ga., June 12.—[Special.]—In the drug store of Messrs. Mabbett & Jelks is a pine box about five feet long, six inches eep and six inches broad, that has attracted auch attention. It contains a very rare specimen of the fish It contains a very rare specimen of the fish family, and through the courtesy and generosity of Dr. J. Harris Pierpont, of Pensacola, Fla., it is to be placed in the museum of the Brooks County Library association. It is at present in a hermetically sealed tin case, a suitable glass tube has been ordered for this "rarus pisces," in which it will be preserved in a solution of chloral hydrate. served in a solution of chloral hydrate.

Accompanying the valued gift, is a letter to Miss Annie McIntosh, the librarian, in which there is a clipping from the Daily Pensacola News, descriptive of the specimen. It reads

AN ICHTHYOLOGICAL CURIO.

Captain William Johnston, of the fishing smack G. L. Daboll, was yesterday exhibiting one of the most curiously formed specimens of the fish family ever seen hereabouts. It was caught well off shore in the gulf, and its like was never before seen, either by the hundreds of men who have fished on the gulf grounds for twenty years or more, or by many masters of ships now in port, and who have seen the strange fishes of every part of the globe.

In form it somewhat resembles the gar-fish, but to no known family of that species does it belong. It has the snout of a sword-fish, the mouth of a sucker, the body of an eel, and the tail of a rat. It is scaleless, and or varying flesh tints in color. In the works of the United States fish commission it has no place. Nor may any reference to it be found in the Smithsonian institute's publications. It is about four feet in length. Its snout is about nine-inches long, nearly round, being about four inches in circumference, and hollow throughout its length. It was caught with a hook and line.

Dr. Pierpont was a resident of Quitman during his boyhood days, and this exhibition of his remembrance of his old-time home is highly appreciated by the library association. AN ICHTHYOLOGICAL CURIO.

THREE SHOTS FIRED. A White Blacksmith Shoots at an Inoffen

sive Negro. LAGRANGE, Ga., June 12.-[Special.]-A blacksmith named McNab shot at Bill Dix three times Wednesday afternoon. Bill bad been before the mayor and had given some information concerning McNab, which the latter did not like. He approached Bill at Truitt's stable, and, without warning, commenced firing upon him. The last shot struck him in the left hip, producing a flesh wound. If the ball had gone an inch higher, it would probably have produced death. It was a narrow escape. Dr. F. M. Ridley extracted the ball. Bill has been employed by Mr. J. G. Truitt for the last eighteen years, and is a hard-working, inoffensive negro. McNab was arrested and jailed. Another Trunk Line. Columbus, Ga., June 12.—[Special.]—Your correspondent is reliably informed, and the official announcement will soon be made, that the Memphis and Charleston railroad has leased the Chattanoga, Rome and Columbus leased the Chattanooga, Rome and Columbus railroad. A meeting of the stockholders of the Memphis and Charleston has been called for June 15th, to complete this lease, and issue Memphis and Charleston bonds to extend the Chattanooga, Rome and Columbus road, presumably to LaGrange. This, with the Macon and Birmingham, and Georgia Midland makes a quick route to Columbus. The Columbus Southern will become a part of the system, and thus complete a new trunk line from the west to Florida.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., June 12.—[Special.]—Hobart Hawkins, a prominent citizen of this county, and brother of Solicitor James E. Hawkins, was run over and killed by a train on the Birmingham, Powderly and Bessemer dummy line. He fell between the cars, while the train was in region and was instantic killed. The dead man was about forty-five years old and leaves a family.

Fifty Years in the Penitentiary. AMERICUS, Ga., June 12.—[Special.]—In the superior court Phil Johnson, colored, was sentenced to fifty years in the chain-gang for the burning of the depot at Cobb's, on the Savannah, Americus and Montgomery railroad. In the case of Monroe Adams, another negro, charged with arson, the jury failed to agree, and a mistrial was declared. Adams is charged with fring the store of Brown & French, in this city. The jury stood ten for conviction and one for acquittal, the twelfth joror having been excused. joror having been excused.

Defended His Wife.

FORT GAINES, Ga., June 12.—[Special.]— Last evening about dark, a prominent citizen of our town severely chastised a couple of the demi monde with a buggy whip for grossly insulting his wife upon the streets, and the general verdict is, "served them right."

The Veterans to Meet.

Married on the Sly. Columbus, Ga., June 12.—[Special.]—On May 22d, Mr. Q. A. Brooks and Miss Ella J. Lockhart, both popular young people, of this city, were married. The fact was not made known to their many friends until the marriage notice appeared in today's Evening Ledger.

The People Will Not be Counted.

Columbus, Ga., June 12.—[Special.]—It is leared by many that the census-takers will not complete the work here. It is estimated that Columbus has thirty-five thousand inhabitants, and it is feared that the census will not show more than twenty thousand, as the census-takers will not have time to get around.

COMING TOGETHER.

THE PEOPLE OF THOMASTON RE-

Of the Authorities of the Macon and Bh mingham—The Money at Issue Will be Raised and All Will be Well.

Macon, Ga., June 12.-[Special.]-The trouble between the Macon and Birming and Thomaston people, it is understood, is about settled. The order passed by Judge Boykin on last Monday, it is thought, will practically settle the dispute. The citizens contended that, according to the report of the engineers, they had nothing to pay, while on the other hand the railroad com-pany contend that of the difference of cost, according to the report con-strued in the light of the statute and the decisions of the supreme court, the citizens should pay nineteen thousand forty-seven dollars. The court decided in favor of the railroad company, and the citizens have gracefully submitted to the ruling, and have gone to work to raise the money. They will have to deposit the money as soon as the road is built to the five-mile limit, and this will be done early next week, so the citizens have little time to spare in making the deposit. If they fail to come up in time with the money the railroad company will be free to build on the line heretofore selected.

This the company will do, as they are not disposed to go through Thomaston at such an outlay of money.

The citizens of Thomaston, it is understood, are having some difficulty in raising the money, and it is believed they will call on their friends in Macon who have sided with their friends in this controversy.

troubles being now practically removed, the road will now be rapidly pushed to completion. The road, when completed, will not only be invaluable to Macon and the state at large, but will also be a fine property for the company.

NEARLY $50,000 IS INVOLVED In a Suit Being Tried in the United States

Macon, Ga., June 12.—[Special.]—There is being heard in the United States court the case of W. B. Tower vs. the New England Mortgage and Security company.

in this court in some time, involving about 16,000 acres of land.

It seems that W. B. and B. F. Tower mortgaged this land to the New England Mortgage and Security company for about $48,000, and afterwards sold the mortgage to the Union Trust company, of Atlanta.

The company, a few weeks ago, attempted to foreclose the mortgage, and Mrs. Tower claimed the land. The company now try to show fraud, and say a transfer was made to W. B. & B. F. Tower to the wife of the former to escape payment of the debt.

The case will probably occupy the attention of the court for the balance of the week.

TO INDICT HALL.

Another Grand Jury Called to Investigate Charges for Perjury.

Macon, Ga., June 12.—[Special.]—A few days ago, it will be remembered, the indictment against Colonel T. A. Hall, for perjury, was granted in the United States court in this city. Judge Speer immediately drew another grand jury to investigate the same charges, and they met today for this purpose. About two hours of the morning was spent in getting a jury and they went in about noon. No true bill had been found up to 2 o'clock, and at that hour the jury adjourned to meet again the jury adjourned to meet again tomorrow. It is possible that Hall may not be indicted again, but the general impression is that he will have to answer the charge of

The importance of purifying the blood cannot be overestimated, for without pure blood you cannot enjoy good health. At this season nearly every one needs a good medicine to purify, vitalize, and enrich the blood, and Hood's Sarsaparilla is worthy your confidence. It is peculiar in that it strengthens and builds up the system, creates an appetite, and tones the digestion, while it eradicates disease. Give it a trial. interest of the commencement, with many, centers in the annual concert, with chorus and orchestra. The cultured audience on Tuesday night was pronounced the largest that ever assembled in the spacious and beautiful chapel, standing-room being literally at a premium. The following pieces were grandly and exquisitely rendered by the ladies' orchestra, consisting of forty performers:

Overture to Zampa; Wine, Wife and Song Waltzes (Strauss); Wiener Blut

Waltzes (Strauss); the Chase of the Lion, and Radetzky March. The choruses were given by seventy-five voices. A striking piece was the representa-tion of a fire alarm by the orchestra and an invisible chorus, with realistic effects. The solos were of the highest order, being per-

He remarked concerning the original-ity of the essays, that they were grooped about some central topic studied in school; each sub-ject was assigned and the manner of treatment outlined; that no outsider could have well fitted a composition into the plan; that he had seen the pieces at different stages of com-pletion; that the majority of them were not

MILTON'S LIFE AND WORKS.

The first section of the senior class, consisting of eclectic and regular graduates, discussed Wednesday morning Milton's Life and Works. The essays were interesting and instructive, some quite brilliant, and were read distinctly and musically.

The graduation scene at night was one of radiant beauty and pure loveliness never to be forgotten. As the curtain rolled up revealing the fairy vision, the audience enthusiastically applauded. In front, arranged in a semi-circle, were the seven full graduates clad in their Grecian robes and Oxford caps of spotless white. Behind and to one side, facing the orator of the evening, were seated the remaining twenty-three graduates, dressed in white lawns. Farther at the rear, and in the center of the stage, was thefull orchestra, prepared to play the opening piece. Last, and surgounding all, was the chorus. As the electric chandeliers shed their splender on the whole, the setting of the stage completed the scene; pyramids of flowers, statuary, drapery and pictures and other works of art on the walls. The essays, discussing fine art, seemed to be inspired from the environments.

Dr. Hawthorne was introduced by Professor Cox to deliver the baccalaureate address. It abounded in choice allusions to chivalry in beautiful figures, sensible thoughts and eloquent oratorical flights. The School Election in Cartersville The School Election in Cartersville.

CARTERSVILLE, Ga., June II, 1890.—Editors Constitution: Your correspondent of this city, in his letter of the 5th, does me an injustice. In speaking of the election of a superintendent of public schools, he makes the statement that the gentleman elected received a majority of three votes over the combined followings of three competitors. While my name is not mentioned, he undoubtedly includes me, and the statement is calculated to make a false impression. I had not even expressed a desire for the position. The act is, the gentleman elected was the only applicant before the board, and he was also the only teacher in Georgia, so far as I know, that knew an election would be held. Notwithstanding we were both in the service of the same town, and the same school system, and were entitled to equal chances, he alone was favored with notice to muster his forces and prepare for the contest. My friends, members of the board, were not expecting an action of so great impartance to be taken, and several of them were not in attendance at all. Like me, they had been purposely kcpt in the dark. The whole plan seems to have been designed to surprise and defeat me. I was present when "t was resolved to go into an election and taciti," allowed my name to be voted on, but I would not have done so had I known that such a conspiracy had been formed.

I cannot believe that the course pursued has a precedent in the history of public school beards, it is generally customary to give timely public notice.

Man in His Way.

Augusta, Ga., June 12.—[Special.]—The engineer of the passenger train from Atlanta, that reached this city a little after 7 o'clock this morning, discovered the mangled body of a negro man lying by the track, just beyond the Woodlawn crossing. The train could not be stopped, but the news was brought to the city and the coroner notified that a' man lay dead just without the town limits. In the pocket of the dead man's coat a letter was found, addressed to Thomas Jemison. The letter was postmarked Columbia, S. C., and the authorities there will be notified at once to find if he has a family or friends in that place, so that they may send for the body. The man is supposed to have been killed by the way freight that left here for Atlanta at 4 o'clock this morning, the inference being that he was either knocked from the train as he attempted to board it, or that he was stealing a ride.

ROBERT ESCAPES

DURING THE EXCITEMENT OF THE RIFLES' ARRIVAL.

While the Attendants' Backs Were Turned He Walked Out Through the Read Entrance of the Infirmary.

H. J. Robert escaped from Providence infirmary last evening. and up to a late hour his whereabouts were not known.

Yesterday morning his wife, who had been a constant attendant at his bedside during his confinement, went to her home in the country. Robert has been troubled with delirious pells ever since he has been in the infirmary, and on Sunday night his condition was such that it took Bailiff Merritt and Mr. Brown both to hold him on the bed.

He would get up and say that he wanted to go to the park, and talk very wildly; and it took all the attendants could do to keep him

HE TALKED BATIONALLY Yesterday morning. During the afternoon he told Mr. Brown that he had had an attack of meningitis several years ago, and that he was still suffering from the effects of the disease. Mr. Brown told him that he would have the negro attendant to give him 'a good rubbing, which was done, and after which Robert said that he felt much better.

During the day he showed frequent symptoms of aberration of the mind and was very closely watched. HIS ESCAPE.

When the excitement of the arrival of the Rifles was at its height Mr. Brown took some ladies over to the Kimball to witness the pageant.

Bailiff Merritt went across the street to talk with a friend, and when he returned Robert's cot was vacant. A hasty inquiry revealed the fact that Rob ert had got up, took a package of clothing, leaving only the coat that he ordinarily wore, and, in spite of the remonstrances of the woman in charge of the wards, had left the building by the rear entrance.

So soon as the escape was made known, the police were put on notice, and Bailiff Merrit and Mr. Brown instituted a rigid search for the prisoner.

Up to a late hour, nothing had been heard of

> THE SUNDAY CONSTITUTION $2 A YEAR. SENT TO ANY ADDRESS.

ATLANTA, GA., JUNE 13, 1890.

Climbing Still Higher! Here is another notch THE CONSTITU-TION has reached in its career.

In 1884 THE CONSTITUTION erected its present building, six stories in height, and by far the largest newspaper building in the southern states.

At the time it was built it was too large for the work of the paper, and one-half of the building was tenanted.

Since that time the rapidly increasing business of THE CONSTITUTION has made it necessary to occupy every room in the building, except that held by one tenant on a five years' lease.

Not only that, but increased room was in such essential demand that two months ago it was found necessary to build under Forsyth street the full length of the building, which work has just been completed, giving us a magnificent room, one hundred feet in length, under Forsyth street.

But still there is not room enough, and an advertisement in another column of this paper shows what THE CONSTITUTION is doing to meet the demand for more room.

Bids are invited for the addition of seventh story to the building, the plans for the same having been completed vesterday

Six years ago THE CONSTITUTION purchased the most complete press in the southern states, paying Messrs. R. Hoe & company $27,000 for it, costing twice as much as any press now in use in the state.

We thought this press could meet any emergency that could possibly arise for ten years at least. But it has outgrown its usefulness, and, as stated a few days ago, we have placed an order for another press, which, having the advantage of recent improvements, can better do the work of the paper. THE CONSTITUTION is the only paper in the southern states that finds i necessary to run two presses in the publication of its editions.

But THE CONSTITUTION is growing, and it is ever ready to meet the demands that increasing business may call for.

After all, its success is the best evidence that the people are satisfied with it, and their approval shows that the south can sustain a genuine metropolitan newspaper as easy as any of the populous business centres of the north or west.

Another Bankrupt Law.

After nearly a generation there is a fair prospect of securing another general bank-

The bill now pending in congress, with a strong probability of becoming a law, makes a pamphlet of seventy-three pages. A fuli synopsis of such a voluminous affair cannot be condensed within our brief limits, but a fair idea can be given of the character of the

Under the new measure any person shall be adjudged a bankrupt if he has, within six months prior to the filing of a petition in bankruptcy against him, concealed himself to avoid arrest, or under the service of civil process; concealed, secreted or removed his property to avoid its being levied on under legal process against him; departed or remained away from his residence or place of business, with intent to defraud or delay his creditors; failed for thirty days, or until the return day of the process, to secure the release of any property levied on by attachment or execution; made a conveyance gift, or transfer of all or any part of his assets with intent to defraud or delay his creditors: made a written declaration of his nability to pay he debts and filed it in court; made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors; neglected for sixty days after written demand shall have been personally served to pay an open account which was at the time of such service due by him for goods, wares or merchandise sold and delivered; procured or suffered a judgment to be entered against him with intent to defraud or delay his creditors; suffered an execution against him to be returned nulla bona: suspended and not resumed payment of his commercial paper for fifteen days; voluntarily petitioned to be adjudged a bankrupt; while insolvent, for the purpose of giving preference, made a conveyance, mortgage or pledge of any of his property, or suffered any of his property to be taken or levied on, by process of law or otherwise, or permitted the creation of a lien on any of his property; while insolvent made a contract or contract personally, or by agent or broker, for the purchase or sale of a commodity or comodities, with an intention not to receive or deliver the same, but merely to receive or pay a difference between the contract and the market price thereof at a time subsequent to the making of such contract or

It is plain that the object of the bill is t make it easy for the creditor to force the debtor into bankruptcy. Penalties are provided for absconding, falsifying returns, omitting or suppressing important facts, false valuations, fictitious expense bills and other dishonest methods. It will be seen that dealing in futures comes under the ban. While the bill enables the honest debtor to get relief, it is a powerful scourge in the hands of the creditor. There seems to be little chance for a dishonest man to defraud his creditors, but, on the other hand, there would seem to be an opportunity for a severe creditor to catch a debtor slipping up on some small point, and then utterly smash-law as a whole. It does not deal in an even-handed way between the creditor and the debtor, but is drawn almost entirely in the interest of the creditor class. It is to be hoped that some of these features will be modified, and that a bill occupying a middle ground between the old law and the new one will pass. A judicious general bankrupt law is needed as a permanent thing, and an injudicious one would lead to very serious consequences.

We cannot endorse the proposed bankrupt

The Rifles Tonight.

The Rifles have returned from their contest in the west crowned with the laurels of victory. Under all the circumstances, it was a notable victory, and they richly deserve all the honors that have been showered on them since their wonderful exhibition of skill at Kansas City.

On their way home, they have been honored with ovations all along the route. At every town and city along the way, the people and the military have gathered to do them honor. Their victory-a most signal and significant one-seems to have aroused great enthusiasm everywhere, and it culminated in an ovation in Atlanta yesterday that must have been very gratifying to the soldier boys.

The enthusiasm over the victory of the Rifles is by no means out of proportion to the significance of the victory itself. The contest in which the company engaged was an extremely arduous one, and they bore off the prize from the crack military organizations of the country, making a wonderfully brilliant display of tactical skill, nerve, discipline and endurance.

It was a great day for the Rifles, and a great day for Atlanta.

In the midst of the enthusiasm of which they were the recipients, and enjoying the results of a hard-earned victory, the Rifles had their thoughts on home, and they graciously responded to an invitation extended by THE CONSTITUTION, in behalf of the children of Atlanta, to give an exhibition drill for the benefit of the Elephant fund. There is a pardonable desire on the part of the people of Atlanta to see this crack company, which has so magnificently illustrated Atlanta, give an exhibition drill, and this desire will be gratified tonight at the opera-

The Rifles will be assisted by the reprecentatives of other companies, and a most interesting programme has been arrangeda programme that will delight and satisfy the large audience that is sure to gather.

The boys will be on their mettle, fired with the glow of victory, and they will make the exhibition one well worthy of their skill and discipline. The spectacle at the opera-house tonight will be an exceedingly brilliant one.

A Friend to the South.

The people of the south will appreciate the work which is being done for them by the Indianapolis Sentinel. We have noticed that it has been the policy of this paper to take up the cudgels in defense of the south whenever an attempt has been made to blacken her fair name, and in columns of ringing editorials it has refuted all slanders on the south and southern men.

Thus, it denounces an article in a local contemporary entitled "The Savagery of the in which the people of Quincy, Florida, are abused and blamed for the killing of Deputy United States Marshal Saunders. The facts of the case are familiar to all, and the Sentinel, on behalf of the people of Florida, reviews the evidence, and lays the blame where it belongs, while it soundly rates the Indianapolis Journal for its attempt to distort the facts into a southern outrage, and to vilify the innocent people of the town where the tragedy occurred. The Sentinel denounces all such attempts as mean efforts to bulldoze and misrepresent the interests of a law-abiding people, for such, it maintains, the southern people are and says that no friend to the south, as the Journal claims to be, could so wilfully misrepresent it.

The Sentinel states the case clearly when it says that there is a disposition on the part of many newspapers to hold the whole south responsible for every little local crime which is committed, as, for instance, the bringing of this unfortunate affair in Florida under the general head of "Savagery in the South." This it denounces in the strongest terms, and while it lays the blame where it belongs it valiantly defends the south from the general accusation which is made. We need more papers like the Indianapolis Sentinel in the north and west; papers that have the courage of their convictions, and are willing to hear the evidence before they pass judgment; that will sift every slander on the south, and prove before they preach, and "nothing extenuate, nor set down aught in malice."

The Country's Natural Growth

The Chicago Inter-Ocean admits that every week brings fresh evidence of the wholesome and consistent growth of the en tire country.

After this sweeping deliverance our con temporary turns squarely around and says: temporary turns squarely around and says:
There is apparently some growth of a less satisfactory character. In the southern states, notably Tennessee, Kentucky, Alabama and Georgia, the "Hurrah Boys" system of land-trading lis a growing evil. The west is more familiar with such methods, and is not so seriously affected by them just now. Any wide-spread prosperity of general business, on the other hand, always keeps affoat this restless, speculative element of society in the undeveloped sections of the country. Thus it is that violent local reactions occur when the nation, as a whole, is unusually prosperous. There are invariably localities that are in the depths of squalor, and individuals who are absolutely starving in a great country like the United States, when the masses of the people are thriving.

For some time past there has been a disosition on the part of certain leading journals of the north and west to make simila disparaging allusions to the growth of the south. This is natural, but it is not justified by the facts of the case. Some of the new towns in the south which were so vigorously denounced a year or two ago a fraudulent boom towns are today on a solid basis, adding every month to their capital population. Train-loads of northern capitalists continue to come down this way to make investments. Southern tax-book from year to year show a steady increase of prosperity. Our farmers are getting out of debt, our mines and industries are be veloped, and we lead the union in railway track-laying. Doubtless this genuine properity leads to some speculation, but the south is not building up on manufactured

It is the most natural thing in the world that the south, after twenty-five years of peace, should attract outside capital and go forward with a rush. This progress has long been delayed on account of certain political and labor conditions, but we are now at work under new conditions, and men of enterprise who formerly sought the west are looking in this direction, because our natural resources contribute a glittering attrac-

Under the circumstances, our rapid growth is just as natural as that of any other section of the country. We believe that our people generally understand the dangers of so-called booms and will do their best to steer clear of them. We are building for the centuries, and cannot afford to make mistakes.

Captain Sneed and the Guard.

The Gate City Guard did the square thing by their associates, the Rifles, last night.

Captain Sneed and his gallant company hold a warm place in the hearts of Atlanta's soldiery, and their genuine display of hospitality in the meeting last night will bring them still closer to the good will of their brother soldiers.

The Gate City Guard were the first to propose a royal welcome to the victorious Rifles, and the reception at their armory last night was the result of their action. As soon as the news reached the city of the Rifles' victory, the Guard invited them to be their guests at a reception in their honor. The Governor's Horse Guard, the Grady Cadets and the Zouaves insisted that they should assist in acting the part of host, and last night's reception at the Guard's armory was the result.

The military spirit of Atlanta never ran higher, and the outlook was never brighter. All hail, the victors!

All hail, the Guard! All hail. Atlanta's companies!

Poking Fun at McKinley. It is humorously suggested by the Chicago News that Congressman McKinley has paid too little attention to the fact that an Iowa farmer recently paid off a mortgage on his farm by the sale of a meteor which was allowed to fall on his land without the payment of a tax of any sort, and without the possibility of exporting any protected goods in payment,

The News then goes on to speak of this terrible infliction of an untaxed product upon the farmers of Iowa, and demands that Mr. McKinley shall turn his massive brain to the

The little joke at the expense of the tariff Napoleon is all well enough, but our readers will be more interested in the facts in the case. Within the past fifteen years, four heavy meteoric showers have fallen in Iowa, and two were among the most brilliant of modern times. The last one was in May, but the one in 1875 surpassed anything ever known in this country.

The meteor of 1875 exploded about ten miles from earth, but the fragments showed that it weighed 5,000 pounds. It must have been 2,000 feet long and 400 feet in diameter

The fact is true, as stated by the Chicago paper, that the farmer on whose land the meteor fell, sold it at the rate of two dollars a pound, and realized a handsome sum.

How these strange visitors are formed, and whence they come, nobody definitely knows. Just why the state of Iowa should be so peculiarly subject to the visitations is another peculiar question.

If the attempt to poke fun at Mr. McKinley has no other effect, it may lead to renewed interest in these remarkable heavenly bodies which appear to have such a fancy for one particular locality in this country.

THE Rifles tonight. Atlanta should give asing reception to the Rifles at the house tonight. They have generously sented to give an exhibition drill for the bene fit of the Elephant fund in behalf of the children of the city, and this will give everybody an opportunity to witness the evolutions of brilliant corps. The programme will be most interesting one.

AFTER today the debate on the silver bill in the senate will be limited to five minutes. A five minute's speech from a bulky senator will not be in the nature of a revelation

THE military spectacle at the opera-ho tonight will be the most brilliant exhibition of the season. The Rifles will be the central figures, but they will be surrounded by a galaxy representing all Atlanta's soldiery.

The Mexican government has treated the young Prince Iturbide with great severity. The prince, who is an officer in the army, replied to a newspaper attack upon himself, and in his defense incidentally criticized the government. Prince Iturbide was educated in the United States and his mother is an American lady.

The high appreciation in which his humor is held has been distinctly manifested by Mark Twain making a lecture tour with him during the past winter.

Among the most pleasing recollections which cluster about my youthful days, are those which recall my first acquaintance with Richard Malcolm Johnson. He was as genial as he was bright, and he was bright as he was true and noble. I have never known a purer man, and I have never enjoyed the society of a more intelligent gentleman. While he remained at the bar, he was loved by all his professional hyethren, and esteemed for his high acquisitions in legal learning, but his tastes ran not in the line of his profession; belies lettres possessed charms for him which the law could never yield; and so, submitting to the bent of his inclination, as every sensible person should, he has become justly lamous in his chosen field—the world of literature.

Perhaps this is to prevent the Marine hand from playing "Where did you get that hat?" and "Listen to my tale of woe," which Ingalls is said to have ordered Director Sousa to play as often as possible at the white house. Meantime, all Washington rings with it. Now for the drill tonight!

This will be the big event of the weekfitting climax, as it were, to the grand demonstration in the Rifles' honor.

Rifles' inning, and, in the language of "Miss. Priscilla," they are "the people." Everybody wants to see the boys show how they won the prize and brought the great honor to Atlanta OTHER ARRANGEMENTS. While the Artillery, the Horse Guards and the Grady Cadets cannot take part in the

to see the Rifles." Captain Miller is enthusiastic in his praise of the Rifles. "Captain Spencer and his company," he said, "deserve the highest praise for magnificent work they have am sure every Horse Guard will be on hand to give them a hearty cheer tomorrow night." "The Rifles? Yes, indeed, they are the people," was Captain Forbes's comment. "The Artillery is with them, soul and body, and everybody in Atlanta has reason to be proud of them, and especially so is every military man. We will certainly all be on hand to show the boys we know what good drilling is and appreciate it."

And so with them all. The people generally are just as enthusiastic, and from the present outlook everybody is going to the opera-house tonight.

Toot! Toot!! Toot!!!

The sullen boom and the shrill whistle sounded simultaneously.

And then in an instant the city was boiling! From Boyd & Baxter's, and on past the Exposition cotton-mills, the Atlanta cottonmills, and scores of shops and foundries, the shricking steam whistles pierced the air and made a veritable pandemonium!

Louder, clearer, shriller, the whistles rang until they were caught up by the milis beyond the cemetery.

When THE CONSTITUTION suggested the whistle-blowing business, no one expected such demoniac results. The like was never heard before.

But Atlanta, at the first signal, swarmed to the Whitehall crossing. "The Rifles!"

"They come! They come!" was shouted from 20,000 throats.

The locomotives joined in the infernal din. Everything and everybody that could raise a blast of steam and a whistle went wild with

It was the Rifles!

Past crossing after crossing they came on until they reached Forsyth street.

Then- but why attempt to describe it? Atlanta literally turned over, and her matrons and maids, her gray-beards and youngsters surged together in a seething, madding crowd to welcome the conquering heroes.

The gaily bannered train appeared in sight, and the confusion of whistles, cannon, bells and shouts shook the Kimball house to its founda-

The Rifles were home again! THE JOURNEY HOMEWARD.

The Start From Memphis and the Run to Atlanta.

The Rifles' special train was delayed in leaving Memphis until 12 o'clock by the entertainment at Colonel Thornton's.

When the train started out it was midnight and before a dozen miles had been traveled everybody was in bed. The run during the night was a rapid one, and at 8 o'clock the train reached Stephenson. Then the boys began to leave their berths. A telegram from Mr. B. W. Wrenn to Mr. Thad Sturgis informed the boys that an excellent breakfast was awaiting them in Chattanooga. The intelligence was greeted with three cheers and a tiger. The run from Stephenson to Chattanooga was not as rapid as it was during the night, but two hours of life was pleasantly passed on the train.

Just before 11 the train rolled into the union depot in Chattanooga, and the Rifles left for breakfast. The breakfast room was quickly crowded and the clatter of dishes and merry hum of happy voices filled the room.

At the depot the company was met by Colonel B. W. Wrenn, of the East Tennessee. Mr. Wrenn had the fastest running engine or the road under the shed. It was handsomely decorated and when the boys were through breakfast the engine was coupled to the train Then the Rifles started on their last ride.

As the train neared the Georgia line the boys grew happier and as the train crossed the line a great shout went up.

The boys were home again.

The engineer, Mr. Deovers, made the noise greater by giving his whistle all the racket it ould make.

At Dalton the train was received by the Dalton Guards in full uniform. The depot was thronged with ladies and children, and a royal reception was given the boys. After the train stopped the Rifles formed on the platform and Dalton troops came to a salute. Then Lieutenant Jones, of the Daltons, gave the Rifles a great welcome back to Georgia, to which Colonel Hulsey replied.

Baskets of rare and beautiful flowers were sent to the car by Dalton ladies, and the Rifles' coach was laden with them. As the train pulled out, the Guards fired a

GOING TO MEET THEM.

The Ride to Austell and the Coming Into Atlanta. Eighteen miles in twenty minutes was the run made by the special train bearing the Artillery detachment to Austell.

The train left the East Tennessee depot at 3:30. On the front car, were the artillerymen and their gun. Lieutenant A. M. Perkerson was in command, of both the committee on re-ception and the firing squad. The members of the committee were Lieutenant Thomas B. Ferris, Sergeant Engene M. Mitchell, Corporal R. B. Blackburn and Privates J. L. Key and Carter Wright.

The firing squad was made up as follows: Chief of section, Sergeant W. J. Keeling gunner, H. Y. Garrett; detachment, Henr Brady, Dr. A. P. Ebbert, J. F. Kempton, J. P. Drake, Q. E. Turman, R. B. Forbes, Dr. H. Y. Wright; ordinance sergeant, T. J. Clower. In the coach behind were committees of the Gate City Guard, the Governor's Horse Guards and the Grady Cadets, with a number of citi

The Gate City Guard had Lieutenant Ber Goldsmith, and Messrs. Charles Mc-Lendon, Judge Sowman, W. S. Collier and Hugh McCarnell.

From the Horse Guards there were Messrs. F. B. Law, C. H. Miller, George M. Hope and Frank M. Stewart.

From the Grady Cadets there were Messrs.

Walter Kirkpatrick, Henry Lewis, Walter Glenn and Charles Winn. Among the citizens were Mr. P. H. Snook. probably the most enthusiastic Rifleman of them all; Mr. W. B. Miles, who went to meet the Atlanta party, and a number of others.

The run to Austell was uneventful. Arrived there, it was found that a wait of half an hour was necessary. The time was spent on the hotel veranda. When the whistle of the approaching engine was heard there was a rush for the East Tennessee track, and then a yell and a crash from the artillery gun. The boys had come. It was a happy crowd, and a lively, though travel-stained one. Ten minutes was spent in hand-shaking and talking over the great victory, and then the run nto the city was resumed.

Another gun from the Artillery train and anounced that Howell's had been reached, and a minute later the train was at Boyd & Bax The big factory had been beau tifully decorated, and everybody was in the outside yelling for the Rifles. The big whistle

From there to the union depot the track were lined with people. And that first screech was followed by others in such quick success sion that it seemed to those on the train as if pandemonium had broken loose. Often times they had to stop their ears, so intense was the noise.

Nearer the city all heads were out. The train had slowed up and the people on the outside were able to shout greetings to their friends on the inside. The Rifles got together in one car and, with 'their gayly decorate brooms, stood ready to alight.

Then the train stopped. With a Rifles' "yell" they filed from the train, the band struck up "Dixie," and they were at home again.

AT HOME ONCE MORE.

The Grand Demonstration With Which the Victors Were Greeted Upon Their Arrival. Yesterday, beginning early in the afternoon the business streets of Atlanta wore an unusually animated appearance.

Everything indicated the great gala day that it was; everybody partook of the all pervading enthusiasm of the hour. "The Rifles! The Rifles! When will they get here? How long is it till the train come These questions and exclamations were or the lips of the throngs everywhere as they moved to and fro along the crowded streets. Stay-at-home members of the company were busiest and most enthusiastic of all. They could be seen hurrying here and there in pursuit of the preparations of welcome to their conquering comrades. The armory on Broad street was the rendezvous for the Rifles as well as the crowds of congratulating friends.

Early in the day the stylish armory was given over to the hands of the decorators Bunting and flowers were profusely used in making it refreshingly beautiful, to delight the home-coming conquerors. The entire front of the armory was hung in flags and bunting, and suspended from a rope stretched from the roof of the building to the engine-house across the street, hung the large flag of the company In full life-size, tacked to their flag was the picture of Bob Bruce, the Rifles' mascot. Under the portrait were words to that effect, and at the bottom of the suspended flag was a banner bearing the inscription:

"WE ARE THE PEOPLE." Many other buildings were also hung with flags in honor of the Rifles, and, in fact, the city bore a holiday air.

As the afternoon wore on and the hour set for the arrival of the Rifles' special train neared, the streets presented more animated scenes. The gathering military made a lively feature of the throngs, the flashing uniforms of infantry, cavalry and artillery appearing at every turn.

The soldiers talked enthusiastically as they hurried to their armories, and by every class of citizens nothing else engaged conversation but the matchless Rifles and their gallant victory. Ladies smiled on the groupes of military as they repaired to their rendezvous, and little children made the streets ring with their admiring prattle. The throng began centering first along Wall and Pryor streets and round the union depot. Long before the train arrived the sidewalk along the principal streets leading to the depot were packed from wall to curb, and the windows high up in the hotels and business blocks were alive with a fluttering mass of en thused humanity. A notable feature of the multitudes that lined the streets was the predominance of ladies, and the polished presence of Atlanta's society people.

Such an outpouring of her populace, truly Atlanta has never before beheld. No event since the much lamented and beloved Grady was laid to rest has called forth such a general outpouring of people in all walks of Pride for the gallant soldier boys throbbed in every heart, from the scarred veteran with silvered locks and the staid business man to the beautiful ladies and chivalrous vouths. whose sweet smiles and proud huzzas made the day one of triumph and glory.

Words can hardly convey an idea of the crowd, as it was massed when the Rifles' train arrived, It was inspiring in its notableness, grand in the reception it gave.

Ferming of the Escort, It was the finest military display, local in its ature, that Atlanta eyer turned out.

The procession reached from Broad street bridge, around Marietta street, and up Peachtree to the First Methodist church.

All the military of the city, the police and fire departments turned out to greet the victorious Rifles.

The Grady Cadets were in the line, making their first appearance in public, dressed in their handsome new fatigue uniforms. Another special feature was the long line of delegates to the International Typographical convention, who took a conspicuous part in the procession.

Then the line of carriages in which the Rifles were driven.

The carriages were tendered by Messrs. Jones & Rosser and Stewart & Bowden, the decorated officers' carriage with four horses, being the compliment of the former gentlemen. In the formation of the military escort there was not a hitch or a jar. Not over a half hour was passed from the arrival of the first detachment until the train rolled in and the parade was starting en route to the Gate City Guard armory. The last company to arrive had just gotten in position when the Rifles' train rolled up, so nicely was everything First to arrive were the carriages for the Rifles who had done the glorious work.

At the head of the line, was an elegantly decorated vehicle drawn by four horses, the leaders glistening black thoroughbreds, and the other two high-steping greys.

Mr. Bob Jones, in the uniform of the Horse Guards, held the reins. The carriage was almost covered with roses and blossoms, inter-twined with evergreens. The two large side lamps were filled with red and white roses and the wheels were literally hidden in garlands and bunting. Miss Emma Jones, Mr. Bob Jones's sister, decorated the carriage. The horses were also gaily decorated, each wear-ing at his head, long silk streamers of red, white and blue.

Then came the other carriages, six of the finest in Atlanta. They were sent by Messrs. Stewart and Bowden. When the Rifles left Atlanta Mr. Frank Stewart, who is an enthu-siastic admirer of the boys, said if they won the prize he would carry them from the depot on their return, and so it was that Mr. Stewart had six of the seven carriages, all of them handsome and stylish ones.

The line of carriages swung into Wall street at a trot, bringing up at the curb facing the union depot. There they awaited the arrival of the train.

A few minutes after the arrival of the carriages Sergeant White, at the head of a detachment of mounted policemen, five abreast, moved up Pryor street and deployed along

About twenty minutes to six o'clock inspiriting bugle notes were wafted to the ears of the assembled multitude, from the direction of the new capitol. A few minutes later the Gov-ernor's Horse Guards, dismounted, in com-mand of Captain Miller, appeared on Wall street at Loyd. On up Wall to Peachtree the cavalrymen marched, their spanking new uniforms and the gay notes of their bugle corps creating a storm of ap-

Following the Horse Guards came the Atlanta Artillery in charge of Captain Forbes.

Just at this time the distant boom of cal non was heard. With one voice the vast crowd sent back an echo that was caught up by the whistles and gongs of a score of lo tives side-tracked for the occasion.

The echoes of the outburst had not died out when Captain Lyman Hall, at the head of the Grady Cadets, came round the corner of Decatur and Pryor streets. A shout that must en heard and sent back by the vic torious Rifles, went up when Captain Hall and his cadets turned into Wall street and came to

It was the first time the Gradys have ever appeared in their new black broadcloth, gold and buff striped uniforms. Their reception was in the nature of an ovation, in enthusiasm sec-ond only to that accorded the lions of the day. Another dull rumbling boom, a little nearer this time, and another volley from the engine whistles and gongs, with a chorus of thousands of human voices, then the booming of the cannon came closer and closer. The crowd went wild with enthusiasm.
Whistles blew, gongs rang, and the shouts of ten thousand vices rent the skies.

As the train neared the depot, the enthu siasm knew no bounds. Hats went in the air and handkerchiefs and banners were flung to the breeze in bewildering confusion. At the very height of the excitement the fronts of the Gate City Guard came down Peach tree and into Wall street, escorting a long line of stay-at-home Rifles in citizen's dress under command of Leutenant Richardson. Each Rifle wore a broad gold-fringed green badge of silk, and carried in place of his gun a walking

Cheer after cheer went up as each familian face appeared on the platform, and the gallant Rifles were literally handed from the car to the ground by the enthusiastic multitude. Each one of the victors carried a broom, tied with streamers of red, white and blue, and with their brooms and streamers flying the victors marched down Wall street, in front of the assembled military, to the music of grand old Dixie by the Zouave band. It is impossible to describe the enthusiasm of the scene as the Rifles marched by their comrades who had remained at home, each successive four took its place in the carriages that were in waiting.

Up to the roof, the Kimball windows revealed a mass of admiring friends of the Rifles, most of them ladies. Along all the streets it was the same way, walls alive with people, streets packed with people, all wild with delight over Atlanta's victory.

To the first carriage, elaborately decorated and drawn by four horses, Captain Spencer, with Lieutenants Spencer and Spook and Bob Bruce, the mascot of the company, were escorted by Captain Sneed and Captain Miller and Hall with detachments of their com-

Spencer formed them in company front along one side of the banquet table. The Horse Guards and Grady Cadets followed taking positions behind the Rifles. Then the Gate City Guards and the Artillery marched in with the detachment of Rifles in citizen's dress, who were arranged along the opposite side of the banquet table facing their victorious comrades.

After music by the Zouave band the speaking began.
INTRODUCING THE SPEAKERS.

Mr. Clark Howell, Jr., who had been selected by the captains of the different companies to preside at the meeting, called the assemblage to order by saying:

Captain Spencer, the Riffes and Fellow Soldiery:
In the invitation extended me to preside tonight

the specific statement was made that there would be but few speeches and those few would be but brief. Therefore, in introducing the speakers my time must be proportionately brief. Suffice it to say that Atlanta welcomes you and shares with you the joy of this occasion. Though a life-long resident of this city I have never seen such enthusiasm displayed as that which greets your return to our midst. [Applause]. This demonstration satisfies me that Atlanta's military spirit is ever ready to respond to any just call made upon it. Hereafter, never let it be said that any merchant or business man is unwilling to extend the assistance that any member of his force may offer in his services to the calls of our soldiery, for in sustaining Atlanta's glory as you have done, you have shown what our military can do. [Applause.] The merchant who protests against this contribution to our city's prestige does not deserve success, and might not succeed; the house that encourages it, exhibits the old Atlanta spirit, and ought to be rewarded for it.

It gives me pleasure to present to you, the mayor of the city, who will welcome back to us and thank you for what you have done—the Hon. John T. Glenn. MAYOR GLENN SPEAKS.

MAYOR GLENN SPRAKS.

Mayor Glenn rose amid the hearty cheers of all the boys and said:

Captain Spencer, Officers, and Members of the Atlanta Riffes: Atlanta is proud of you. You have added additional luster to her name and as her chief official I give you her thanks.

Your success has a significance deeper than the mere wraning of the prize for which you have contested, for it means another triumph of the spirit of Atlanta.

We have overcome obstacles in every quarter and our banner has floated in triumph on every field it has been planted. In your hands it has not lost its prestige. You carried it to the west with the God speed of our citizens and you bring it back with victory emblazoned all over its folds.

Every man, woman and child in Atlanta enjoys your victory and shares in your just pride, and I hope that we will never again hear complaints from the merchants of Atlanta about the loss of time that is necessary for you to perform your military duties.

Gentlemen, I again thank you, and bid you wel-

Mr. Howell then presented Captain Macon B. Spencer, of the Rifles, saying that "he had done for Atlanta on the military field what Grady had done in the field of oratory and ournalism." [Great applause.] Captain Spencer said he was a military man, not a speaker. He, nevertheless, got in a few well-ch marks for his gallant company, and concluded amid a storm of cheers.

COLONEL CALHOUN'S GREETING. nel W.L.Calhoun was the next speaker: "This is the first time." said Mr. Howell, "that the members of the Fourth Georgia battalion have met their colonel face to face. With such a colonel and such a battalion, the fourth Georgia ought to do for the militia of the state what the Rifles have done for the soldiery of the union. [Applause.] I present to you your colonel, Judge W. L. Calhoun. [Ap-

Colonel Calhoun acknowledged the introduction and said: duction and said:
Captain Spencer, Officers and Members of the Atlanta Rifles: I greet you as you come from to telegraph my congratulations; because you represented the south; this sunny land of ours; with forest and streams; its bright flowers; its ifair women; its spiendid civilization; its great men; a land that has not produced one star shining alone brilliantly in the firmament, but a grand constellation, filling the whole sky with glory. The names of Washington, Jefferson, Henry Clay, Lee, Stonewall Jackson, Johnston, Longstreet, Hill, Hood, Gordon, Stuart, Forrest, Ben Hill, William L. Yancy, Toombe, Stephens, and a host of others, will never die. You also represented the city of Atlanta, this lovely city wherein we dwell, and which a few years ago was ravaged by war and charred and blackened walls and chimneys stood as grim sentinels along the deserted streets; but rebuilt and beautiful, full to over flowing and throbbing with nerve and energy, and hope and success. And furthermore, you are a component part of the Fourth Georgia battalion, which I have the honor to command, and which we hope to make an honor to the city and the state.

Your victory, too, has had the unmistakable effect of reviving and increasing the military spirit here, and interesting our people, generally, in our success. To all the military assembled this even ing I would say, let these three words be our motto: Obedience, harmony, duty. General Lee, the greatest military leader of his age, said to his army at Appomattox, after it had made the grandest struggle the world ever saw, and its flag had gone down in defeat, but not in disgrace: "Duty is the sublimest word in our language."

LIEUTENANT HARBY SNOOR.

Lieutenant Snoek also spoke for the returning victors, eliciting the hearty applause of his commander. He said:
Your Honor, Gentlemen and Comrades: It is hardly to be expected that a man who has suissted for a week, or more, on hard tack and waters could deliver an oration fitting in expression of his feelings to such an occasion as this. For it must be remembered that the most elequent oramust be remembered that the most eloquent ora-tor—so considered—only rises equal to the imer-gency after a substantial repast and the im-bibing of various fluids—in fact, entirely bibing of various fluids—in fact, entirely post-prandial. I must, however, express the most heartfelt thanks of both officers and company for this magnificent reception. When in the beginning of our labor to undertake the Kansas City drill, the encouragement was decidely lukewarm: we determined in spite of all obstacles, to demonstrate to the people of Atlanta that the Rifles were worthy of all assistance received. After nearly four years of hard and unappreciated labor, and against great obstacles, we have succeeded in planting our banner in the fore, and I promise you that with the assistance of the press, which is powerful, and with the assistance of the people, which is all-powerful (and whom we represent), the effizer soldiery of Atlanta in all its arms—infantry, cavalry and artillery—will nobly perform their part, and keep well to the front the pennant of honor and victory—where it now floats in defiance to the world.

The banquet was given by the local military, and it was a fitting compliment to close what was, without doubt, the most notable reception with which any volunteer military company in the south was ever honored.

THE STORY OF THE RIFLES.

Something About the Company Atlanta Is when the Atlanta Rifles made their first bow to the public, something over four years ago, it was under circumstances most

In its infancy the company gave promise of brilliant record. Since its formal ushering upon the public stage it has been steadily rising to the fulfillment of that proud career. Composed as its ranks were then, and as they have ever been since, of the flower of Atlanta's young manhood, the Rifles have never for a moment lacked the confidence and admiration of the people who now share in their glorious victory.

In every contest in which the Rifles have engaged, in every victory, in every expedition, whether for the glory of Atlanta and the state, or for the pleasure of the gallant soldier boys, the seal of public commendation has always been upon the record of the company.

At home the members are held in high regard, in distant cities they always meet that consideration accorded to representative From their maiden appearance, in competi tive contest, at Macon in '87, the Rifles at once took their stand in the fore rank of the finest soldiery of the south. There they began a record that has been brightened and incre in glory of achievement by every successive contest in which the company has engaged. At the outset, pushing hard and close the best disciplined, best experienced organization in the country, the company has continued in its shining path until now the laurel wreath of probably the most notable conquest of the past quarter of a century rests upon its standard.

It was a glorious victory, plucked from foemen worthy of even our Rifles' steel.

When the Rifles, ready and eager for the fray, left their city and state for the distant field of conquest, they carried with them the hearty God-speed you and cheerful accouragement of speed. you and cheerful encouragement of a multi-tude of friends and admirers. In their absence the eyes of Atlanta have been upon them, and her great heart has beat more quickly as she has heard the news of their superb bearing in that distant state among strangers.

When the news of the gallant victory came, there was no bounds to the admiring enthusiasm. The victory was no surply when Atlanta put her hand pocket and sent the company to represent her, she knew that her good name and fair fame were safe in the keeping of such sons.

The daily news from the field all along has told a story that has made Atlanta's heart throb with pride. Our Rifles have been feted and toasted and made the lions of the occasion. They have been received and welcomed with distinctions and considerations rarely ever ac-

Not only has this been so since the achievement of the victory which has given the Atlanta Rifles a national fame, but the story of the company's reception on the way to the field and up to the hour of the announcement of the glorious achievement is one marked by a high regard for the young Georgians, both as men and as soldiers.

Socially, they have been since leaving home what they are to the society life of Atlanta. This tells more fittingly than descriptive words what weight the Rifles have had in the social scale of the big encampment.

A RETROSPECT.

What Atlantian does not know the history of the Atlanta Rifles, has not admired their superb appearance and proudly pointed to their matchless discipline. A little more than four years ago the company first emerged into the light of Asanta military life. A score of the most prominent young men of the city were the four They were unexceled in military practice, and the example they set soon gathered to the new company's roster a list of young men of social standing and milcompany.

a list of young men of social standing and mil-itary experience, rivaling that of any or-ganization in the country.

The public welcomed the Rifles most heartily, and from the first they were favorites. They fairly captured the hearts of the people, and the fashionable throng which crowded De-Give's opera-house at their debut is still fresh in the memories of those who were a part of it. In two minutes after organization the company was equipped with arms and uniform—those flashy green and gold uni-the company was equipped with arms and uniform—those flashy green and gold uniform—those been so enthusiastically received and admired in so many cities of the south and north, and east and west.

The uniforms are as fine as money and taste could devise, and everything else connected with the equipment of the company was on a similar scale.

The following is a list of the charter officers of the Rifles.

Captain, A. C Sneed.
First lieutenant, Tom Cobb Jackson.
Second lieutenant, Harvey Johnson.
Junior second lieutenant, W. T. Kuhn.
First sergeant, W. J. Kendrick.
Second sergeant, F. S. Spencer.
Third sergeant, Thomas Fleming.
Fourth sergeant, W. H. Franklin.
Quartermaster-sergeant, P. H. Snook, Jr.
First corporal, Thomas Fitzgerald.
Second corporal, O. S. Nunnally.
Third corporal, Thomas Fitzgerald.
Second corporal, W. L. Wallace.
Since these officers were elected and installed time has wrought some changes in the roll of officers as well as in the ranks of the company.
Captain Macon B. Spencer has succeeded Captain Sneed, and Sergeants Spencer and Snook have risen to the ranks of first and second lieutenants.

Mark Hightower is now first sergeant and Snook have risen to the ranks of first and second lieutonants.

Mark Hightower is now first sergeant and Joe Nash second sergeant. In the Kansas City drill, however, Sergeant Hightower did now serve his company on account of ill health. Mr. George Crawford acted as first sergeant, and while Mr. Hightower is one of the best guides in the state, the Rifles were in no way weakened by having Sergeant Crawford on the right of their line.

Just here a word about the present officers of the Rifles will not be amiss. They deserve all the compliments that can be paid them, so admirably, so ably, have they led their gallant company through the contest.

From captain to corporal it would be difficult to find a company with a handsomer or more competent staff of officers. They are all young men, clear-headed and cool on the field, and with tactics at their finger ends, so to and with tactics at their finger ends, so to speak.

Captain Macon B. Spencer is every inch a soldier. He comes from a family of soldiers. He knows tactics through and through, having risen from the ranks to his present commission, filling ably all the intermediate offices.

He knows tactics through and through, having risen from the ranks to his present commission, filling ably all the intermediate offices.

At the head of his company, Captain Spencer, personally, makes as handsome an appearance as one could wish to see. He has that easy, graceful bearing of the born soldier, of genial face and erect, handsome figure.

The first commission Captain Spencer ever held was a first lieutenantcy in the Gate City Guard when that company was commanded by Captain Harry Jackson, in 1884.

When the Rifles were organized, and upon the resignation of Lieutenant Jackson, Captain Spencer was unanimously elected his successor. He continued first lieutenant of the Rifles until after the company returned from the Nashville drill, when he resigned, and was not actively connected with any company until August last. Then he was called to the command of the Rifles. How well he has filled his place the brilliant record of the company since he took command best shows.

Captain Spencer began his military career as a private in the old Governor's Guard. Later he was color sergeant in the Gate City Guard, under Captain Burke, when that company was in its old-time glory.

First Liutenant Frank S. Spencer is a younger brother of Captain Spencer. He is military through and through, with tactics and prize drills as familiar as his captain's command.

Lieutenant Spencer has risen from a private, and he has had the single bar put on his shoulder strap only a few months.

Like his brother, he did service at the outset of his military career in the Gate City Guard, becoming a member of that company in 1884. At first he was a private, but he was a soldier by nature, and in a short time was appointed left guide, which important office he filled so acceptably that he went up a notch to the first sergeant's place, after the Nashville drill, acting as second sergeant in that contest.

Three months after this the rank of junior second lieutenant was made vacant. Naturally no one else was so well fitted for the place as S identified with the citizen soldiery since his graduation.

He was a charter member of the Rifles, first filling the office of quartermaster sergeant. After resigning this office, Lieutenant Snook went into the ranks, from which he was appointed fourth sergeant.

When the company entered for the Macon drill last spring, or rather shortly before that time, Sergeant Snook was chosen unanimously junior second lieutenant. He acted as second lieutenant at that drill, making a faultless record.

Last September, when Mr. Spencer was promoted, Mr. Snook also stepped up, becoming second lieutenant, and acting as such at the last Piedmont contest, repeating the record made at his first contest in Macon as one of the best officers in the field.

W. W. Richardson is the junior second lieutenant of the company.

He has only recently been elected to that (Continued on Third Column, Sixth Page.)

Sergeant Hightower was one of the squad which won first prize in the squad drill at Macon, and is looked upon as one of the best drilled men in the city among any of the companies. His rank is a very important one, and all things considered, the company could hardly have made a better choice to fill it than he. Acting First Sergeant George Crawford enjoys a wide reputation as a military man. He has been a valued member of several of the crack companies of the state, being an officer in the Milledgeville Cadets at the time that company made its former record in Macon, Ga. The Rifles have taken part in quite a number of competitive contests.

Never have they failed to carry off a prize. Sometimes it was two and three.

The first thing in the way of a contest was an exhibition drill between squads of the company at DeGive's opera-house, soon after its organization. This is pleasantly remembered by many Atlanta people and others, including the local military.

Then the company decided to enter the international contest, at Washington, in '86, but after making every preparation withdrew because negro companies were to be allowed to compete.

owed to compete.

At the first Macon encampment the Rifles entered their maiden contest, acting as Gover-nor Gordon's special escort on that occasion. Then came the great encampment and drill at Nashville, when the Atlanta Rifles, com-at Nashville, when the Atlanta files, competing with a large number of the finest companies in the country, won third prize and the individual prize.

After Nashville, the company entered the second drill at Macon last July.

Then second place in the interstate drill was won and also first prize in the squad drill, and first prize for the best drilled individual soldier.

Last October the Rifles added additional laurels to their fame by carrying off second money in the Piedmont exposition drill.

Then came Jacksonville only a couple of months ago. Everybody is familiar with that drill, and how the Rifles came out.

Last of all, Kansas City. The sequel to that glorious victory is yet to be written.

The history of the Rifles has been a series of successes, both socially and in every othe way. From their debut they have been popular favorites; for the members were favorites in the social world before they organized themselves into a military company.

First was the prize drill and concert at the opera-house, a society event of the day.

Then a little later, a grand drill and ball at Concordia hall, in December, 1884, which was attended by the elite of the city. Two weeks after their ball at Concordia the company gave its opening annual ball at the Kimball. This was one of the most elaborate military entertainments ever given in Georgia. It was attended by ladies and gentlemen from all over the state.

The encampment of the Rifles at Cumberland will be long remembered by the members and the many friends who attended it, as well as by the other visitors to that beautiful seaside resort.

The Dalton Guards on Hand-Some Speeches

DALTON, Ga., June 12 .- [Special.]-The pecial train bearing the Atlanta Rifles, under the charge of that veteran railroad man, B. W. Wrenn, pulled into our station this after-noon at 1:30. Our handsome company, the Dalton Guards, under command of Capt. T. C. Thompson, about forty strong, were at the station and stood in the forefront at present arms. For a square back the streets were arms. For a square back the streets were crowded. The beautiful women and gallant men of this mountain city stood with flying banners, waving handkerchiefs to greet the Rifles on their first stop on Georgia soil. At the command of Captain Spencer, the Rifles filed out and formed a line, and a word of welcome was warmly extended by Captain Thompson, who introduced Lieutenant T. R. Jones, of the Guards, who said:

Captain Thompson, who introduced Lieutenant T. R. Jones, of the Guards, who said:

Gentlemen of the Atlanta Rifles: This organization threw an old shoe after you for luck when you started on your distant journey, and now, as you return wearing in full fruition the honor of having won the highest place in the ranks of the citizen-soldiery of the American union, we sainte and greet you as you again enter upon Georgia soil, and express our sincere gratification over the glorious victory you have won. Georgians are capable of illustrating Georgia anywhere and everywhere. This is equivalent to saying they are leaders and victors. In behalf of the Dalton Guards, the city of Dalton, the volunteer soldiers of the commonwealth, and indeed the whole State I stand here in the gable end of Georgia to welcome you back to your homes and your sweethearts. Your triumph is ours; our joy over it is yours, and upon your arrival at your capital city homes this evening you will have a more enjoyable harvest of the pride felt by all Georgias over the glorious manner in which you have illustrated her abroad as soldiers and thoroughbred Georgia gentlemen."

Colonel W. H. Hulsey for the Rifles responded in a neat speech of thanks to the guards and citizens for the reception given, and gave assurance that the company had kept his honor and character unsullied which was a source of as great pleasure as the premiums they brought back as soldiers.

A general soldier handshaking was indulged in and the cars, laden with flowers culled from our finest gardens, pulled out for Atlanta under firing of a salute from the guards. The Rifles always looking out for Atlanta, secured a promise from the Guards to be with them in October at the exposition. Three cheers and a tiger were heartily given by the Guards for Mrs. Spencer and accompanying ladies.

The Guards will leave here Sunday morning on their own special car for the state encampment.

When

Judge Van Epps Talks About His Plan For the Endowment of the University of Georgia.

The University alumni endowment plan bids fair to result in a gratifying success.

It is still booming, and the boom is growing

Judge Howard Van Epps has received a number of letters from persons in different parts of the state commending the plan suggested by him for providing a fund for the permanent endowment of the University of

As chairman of the Atlanta Alumni association, Judge Van Epps appointed the following persons to attend as the Atlanta contining persons to attend as the Artanta Contingent: Hon. A. H. Cox, Mr. H. H. Cabanisa, Hon. Clark Howell, Jr., Mr. Thomas Cebb Jackson and Colonel John W. Grant. All of these gentlemen wil attend the commen exercises beginning next Sunday at Athens.

When asked about the details of his plan yesterday, Judge Van Epps said:
"There are a certain number of the alumni who are able and who are ready to donate cash sums to constitute an endowment, provided a sufficient amount is raised to accomplish the result and place the university beyond the contingencies of the future. These gentlemen are not willing to do so if the sum contributed by them is simply to be eked out in paying salaries of chairs already starved out of usefulness on a wide plane. But they are willing to give if there is sufficient co-operation among all the alumni to constitute a substantial endowment. The plan that I have proposed was intended to meet the situation of a large number of alumni who were not able to pay in cash, all at once, their contribution to the University fund."

to the University fund."
"How many alumni are there?"
"It is estimated that there are some 1,400 alumni in the state. Of course, some of them are advanced in years and infirm, and they, with others, unable to spare anything from with others, unable to spare anything from their income to aid the university. It is safe to say, however, that there are 500 alumni in the state whose youth and ability as wage-carners would enable them to spare a small annual sum, paid as a premium upon a life insurance policy, provided that much self-denial and patriotic devotion to their alma mater would insure her future glorious career. I propose that alumni to the number of five hundred should be found, and can be found, between the ages of twenty and fifty, who will consent to insure their lives for the benefit of the university, on the

for the benefit of the university, on the ten-payment life plan."
"Does the scheme take?"
"Insurance agents all over the state have addressed me on the subject, urging its feasibility and offering a considerable reduction in rates. The advantages of the plan are that the very young graduates, say twenty-one years of age, who have not thoroughly established themselves in business, will have a proportionate, small sum to pay, as compared with other graduates who have been out in the world for some time, and presumably deriving a larger income."

for the benefit of the university, on the

who have been out in the world for some time, and presumably deriving a larger income."

"How is that?"

"Well, as an example on a proposition which I have before nie, for the age thirty-one, on a ten-payment life policy of $1,000 a graduate insuring his life for the benefit of the university would pay $38.80 per annum, which, in ten years, would cost him $388. This sum is smaller than the four years' tuition charged in first-class colleges and universities. The University of Georgia makes no charges at all. It would seem strictly, just as well as benevolent, that those who had received so much benefit for their manhood at the knees of their alma mater, should contribute to this endowment; and if they all were faithful, and stood shoulder to shoulder, that the university at the end of ten years would have one-half and It they all were lathting, and stood shoulder to shoulder, that the university at the end of ten years would have one-half million dollars of insurance fully paid up. I do not hesitate to say that the legislature of Georgia, without any risk to the state and without the expenditure of one dollar of the public revenue, would doubtless loan its three per cent bonds, which are now easily floated in the market, to the university for its present need."

"That seems fair enough."

"But this is not all. In the ten years contemplated by what I have said the university should turn out every year fifty vigorous, intellectually well-equipped and brawny young fellows. Suppose it was a part of the morale of the graduating class that each member, on leaving the knees of his alma mater, at which he received full tuition, should feel it an obligation of honor to increasing his for her heavier the sum of tuition, should feel it an obligation of honor to insure his life for her benefit in the sum of $1,000, and should honorably keep up his small annual payments to pay up such policy.
"What would be the resul?"
"The result would be in a short time that ne half million dollars more would be poured into the coffers of the university."

"Is the scheme possible?"

"The answer is the putting of another question; 'Is the feeling of loyal devotion to the university deep enough and wide-spread enough to insure the number of men activation contaction that university deep wide-spread enough to insure the number of men acting in co-operation that I have indicated, to submit to such small selfdenial for the period of ten years?
"The scheme is intended to meet the situation of the poorer graduates, men who cannot all at once spare $1,000 or $5,000.
There are some who can and will if all will do their part.

"For instance, I have $11,000 in cash in Atlanta that can be obtained if all will do their part.

part.
'I do not think it is fair to load all of this endownent upon those who have prospered in this world's goods. I believe they are ready to contribute liberally if all will co-operate so as to make the entire sum a practical and liberal endownent. If all will co-operate the University of Georgia can take its place in the not distant future by the side of Yale and Harvard."

RACES AT PIEDMONT PARK. Three Excellent Races for the Benefit of the Elephant Fund.

Three good races. For the benefit of the Elephant fundatoday. The crowds will go to Piedmont park to witness the best races of the season, and the fastest horses in the Atlanta stables will speed around the tracks. Mr. Hughes, the track manager, has arranged for three races, one a running race, another a trotting race and the third a loose The horses that will be entered in each of these races are in fine trim and will make a close and exciting contest on the race track.

The first race will be a running race, and there will be three horses entered.

The second race will be the trotting race, and this will be the most attractive feature of the programme.

the programme.

The last race is the loose pony race, in which four young ponies will be turned loose without riders to fly around the track, led by one of the best educated racers on the Georgia turf.

Let everybody go to the races and help the Elephant fund, at the same time enjoying the most exciting races of the year.

Captain J. B. Hollis Publishes a Card Explaining His Position The Zouaves are considerably torn up.
A meeting was held Wednesday evening,im mediately after the return of the company from Kansas City, but in deference to the Rifles, a full discussion of the case of Captain Hollis was postponed until next Tuesday evening, when the company will decide the matter.

As Captain Hollis has been censured by the members of the company and their friends, he thought it best to publish a card explaining his position, which is given below: It is hoped that the dissentions in the com pany will all be remedied, and that the misunderstandings will be corrected and the com-pany will resume its enviable place in the pany will resume its enviable place in the Fourth Georgia battalion.

Following is Captain Hollis' card:
EDITORS CONSTITUTION: Having had the question asked a number of times, "Why did you not go with the Zouaves to Kansas City?" and knowing that an explanation is due the public, in order to place the company in proper standing, I ask that you publish this card. When the Zouaves left I was deta'n d on account of important lussiness, but was to leave here on Monday night, June 3d, and he with them on Wednesday. Monday afternoon, however, a telegram was recived stating that the company was barred from the drill on account of their failure to enter parade. I telegraphed to know if it was true—and was not advised to the contrary. My business being in a condition that required my personal attention, I considered it my duty to remain at home, knowing that if I should go it would be detrimental to same, and as the company was under command of Lieuenant White who is fully convected to the details. that if I should go it wou'd be detrimental to same, and as the company was under command of Lieutenant White, who is fully competent to handle them with credit, I do not think I should be censured for not going.

Thanking The Constitution for the many courtesies extended the Atlanta Zouaves, and asking the kind indulgence of the public, I am, respectfully yours, Captain Commanding Atlanta Zouaves.

J. C. Nanis vs. Haskell was the title of a case called fn court yesterday.

Nanis sued Haskell for $350 which he claimed as due him by Haskell, he having been employed by the latter as an insurance agent. A motion to amend, by making the firm of Haskell & Whitney parties to the suit, Haskell & Whitney parties to the suit, was dismissed by Judge Van Epps, on the ground that, when an individual had been sued upon a contract, the suit could not be amended in the manner set forth, as this brought out a new and distinct party in the partnership, and being distinct in law could not be made liable in a case of that sort.

CUTHBERT COLLEGE.

IT WANTS MORE MONEY FROM THE

A Committee Before the Board of Trustee at Athens Yesterday—The Money Question.

The branch colleges of the state university want more money.

Cuthbert college is especially anxious to get a larger division of the funds, and is putting n its claim most actively. Mayor Robert L. Moye, of Cuthbert, and Mr. O. A. Barry, representing the branch college at that place, passed through Atlanta last night on their way from Atlans, where they appeared before the board of trus-tees at their annual meeting yesterday.

The purpose of their visit was to ask the trustees to give them $2,000 annually to sustain the Cuthbert branch college. They claim that this amount is stipulated in the contract between the university and the Cuthbert college as the annual division of the land script fund, and they insist on having it paid them as agreed to in the contract.

At present the branch colleges, excepting Dahlonega, are paid a certain amount per capita on the number of male students in attendance.

This reduction was made several years ago when the new chairs were added to the agri-cultural college at Athens, the expense being such as to take away much of the annual division of the land script fund that had been given hitherto to the branch colleges. WHERE THE TROUBLE LIES.

The whole trouble lies in the parsimony of the funds that support the university.

The trustees found it impossible to give the branch colleges $2,000 per annum as they had done from the start, and Mr. Moye says the chances are that the Cuthbert fund will be still further reduced next year unless the trustees arrange to reduce the expenses of the Athens agricultural college. "The reason for it is," says Mr. Moye, "that for the past year the experimental station has paid the university $5,500 for the use of its scientiffic departments. "This rental, so to speak, will be withdrawn after this year, and Chancellor Boggs thinks that little or no money will be had to give to the branch colleges. We think, however, that we are entitled to it by contract, whatever may be the condition of the state college at Athens, and to assert this claim was our mission before the trustees today. They heard our claims with a consideration that is prom-

PIEDMONT EXPOSITION.

A NEW BUILDING NEEDED AND MAY BE BUILT.

Everything About the Grounds Getting in Shape—The Second Floor of the Building Already Engaged.

Things are getting lively.

forward to the greatest exposition ever held With increasing routine the bids for priv leges and exhibits of endless variety have poured in each day since the bidding began, and Secretary Charles Arnold has piled up the greatest bookful of amusements already that was ever recorded for the preceding expositions at Piedmont park. Contracts were closed yesterday with the famous Studebaker Wagon and Carriage company, of South Bend, Ind., and with the Fraser Carriage company, of Aurora, Ill. These con-tracts fill up the entire second floor of the main building, and the first floor only lacks about a thousand square feet of being filled up with engagements for space. A NEW BUILDING NECESSARY. There is much talk at present with the man-agement and directors about erecting a new building on the grounds for exhibits.

The necessity of another large building is keenly felt, and it is thought that steps will have to be taken to secure it before the next President Wylie hopes, however, that with the use of temporary tents the expense and inconvenience of constructing a new building can be deferred until next summer.

A CONTRACT CLOSED WITH PAWNER BILL. The contract engaging Pawnee Bill and his vastly increased wild west show for the exposition was closed yesterday.

The king of cowboys writes that he has a whole army of wild Indians, cowboys, and every representation that makes realistic his scenes of western life. He still has Oklahoma Al, the king of horsemen, Texas Tom, the wonderful express rider, Wyoming Bill, Stampede Steve, Deadwood Dick and scores of others known over the country most familiarly.

A GRAND MILITARY WEEK. President Wylie is arranging for a great week for military men. Realizing the very great interest now mani-fested in military affairs all over the state and south, the directors will set about making this a special feature of the exposition.

Handsome prizes will be offered, and some extraordinary drills arranged between the crack companies of the south. An excellent opportunity will be offered the Atlanta Rifles and Southern Cadets, of Macon, to meet again in a competitive driff. Everything about the exposition is assuming shape, and every indication goes to show that it will eclipse anything ever witnessed

WEST END NOTES.

The work of laying the gas mains in West End goes bravely on, and the lamp posts are being put up. In a few nights the streets will be well lighted up.

Gordon street will soon be substantially macad-amized, and will be one of the handsomest thor-oughfares about the city. After Gordon street is finished other streets will receive needed atten-finished other streets will receive needed attention.

An Atlanta preacher, while visiting West End recently, told the following story to some friends. He said he married a couple a short time ago, and after the ceremony the groom called him to one side and asked what was the fee. The preacher told him that it was not his custom to make any charge, that the fee was left to the discretion of the groom, whereupon the groom thanked him profusely and slipped a quarter of a dollar into his hand, remarking that he hoped to be able to do as much for him sometime. The preacher being already happily married hoped he wouldn't.

Mrs. H. M. Abbett, president of the Ladies' Aid society of the West End Baptist church, is considering the advisability of employing a corresponding secretary to answer the numerous inquiries from this and other states in regard to the mystery of the financial success of their society, without resorting to the customary nuisance of oyster suppers, ice cream and strawberry festivals, or other public entertainments unbecoming a band of Christian workers to raise money for the Lod. A partial report, made under this head in The Constitution a few days ago, elicited these inquiries, showing that The Constitution is popular outside, as well as inside the state, and that everybody reads it.

The Best Recommend. The Best Recommend.

The best recommend a skilled mechanic can give is a specimen of his workmanship and the most satisfactory recommendation for a medicine is its good effect. Now Smith's Tonic Syrup, made by Dr. John Bull, of Louisville, Ky., has been used with good effect in many thousand instances. It needs no other recommend than this. It does every time what is expected of it. If used for childs and fever it cures as certainly and completely as water quenches thirst. In many localities it has almost altogether taken the place of quinine. It has surer effect on childs and fever than quinine, for it has cured many cases where guinine did no good, and then it never produces the after-effect quinine frequently has an the system, such as nausea in the stomach, headache, dizzy sensations, etc. When a person has once used it in place of quinine they will ever afterwards prefer it. Can be bought through us for a great deal less, and soon RESOLD for TEN TIMES THEIR COST. Call at once for Illustrated Circulars, Maps, etc.

A GREAT FIELD-DAY.

THE ATHLETES DETERMINED TO SHOW MUSCLE AND SPEED.

A Proposition to Secure a Field in Edgewood -Manager Whitman's Plans and Ne-gotiations The Boys Training.

The athletes are getting in trim. Having failed to secure Piedmont park as the place for holding their great field-day, they are ne-gotiating now with other parties for grounds else-

They will have their field-day, whatever odds may Manager Whitman of the athletic department of the Young Men's Christian association has the matter in hand, and is exercising every effort to hold the field-day in the near future. He is hav-ling the apparatus moved from the Pledmont ex-position grounds, and is concluding negotiations with parties who own a suitable field on the suburbs in the neighborhood of Edge wood.

These grounds have been surveyed by an engineer, and are found to be excellently suited for gineer, and are found to be excellently stitled for athletic sports, and it is more than likely that Mr. Whitman will close a contract with the owners of the property, engaging the field for a series of field-days, to be given by the Young Men's Christian association from time to time.

field-days, to be given by the Young Men's Christian association from time to time.

The field lies on the outskirts of Edgewood near the residence of Senator Colquitt, and is a spacious and level track, which can easily be transformed into a perfect race track, diamond field, tennis courts and such other arrangements essential for an athetic field-day. If the contract be agreed upon, the field will be enclosed with a fence at once, and will be equipped with all the apparatus necessary for the occasion, and the field-day will be given in the near future.

All of the apparatus for the athletic games and exercises will be earried out to the grounds, having already been ordered and received. A complete gymnasium of bars, trapezes, boxing gloves, hammers, fencing foils, heavy shots, and other apparatus will be put on the grounds, and the programme of the day will be made up of a complete and varied line of games, exercises and sports, such as running races, bicycle races, half-mile dashes, baseball, tennis, football, putting the shot, tug of war, wrestling, etc.

The best part about it all is that a beautiful and convenient lake is near the grounds which can be used by the athletes for bathing and swimming purposes.

Durposes.

A PERMANENT FIELD.

It is the intention of Mr. Whitman to make this a permanent field.
He intends to hold annual field-days in which all of the Young Men's Christian associations and college athletic associations in Georgia will be Invited to join, thus making 'it a day of intercollegiate championship games, as well as a contest between the Young Men's Christian associations of Georgia.

PUTTING THEM THROUGH.

The classes in running, swimming, jumping and other sports are being put through a rigid course of training every day by Manager Whitman.
Under his direction a large class in swimming visit Ponce de Leon every Saturday and practice the art for hours at a time.
Mr. Whitman also takes out a class in running now and then and is developing some fast speeders among the men, whose records at the forthcoming field-day will be astonishing.
Besides these at its surprising to find what a large number of athletes gather at the gymnasium each night, despite the heat, and enter into the exercises with such a hearty zest.
Everything is lovely for a great field-day at Edgewood.

Opelika Mineral Water, at Opelika, Ala., Is Effecting Wonderful Cures.

This water, discovered several months ago, is one of the finest waters ever offered to the public. It is found upon careful analysis to contain curative properties that are simply marvelous. It is a sure cure for indigestion, impure blood, and all kindred diseases. We do not claim that it is a cure-all, but we know that for indigestion, dys-pesia and for all blood troubles, it has no equal.

Louis CHERRY, Esq.: DEAR SIR—I would believe Judge J. J. Aber-crombie just as soon as anyone living. I have known him for twenty-five years in Georgia. His *ccord is clear and unimpeachable.

OPELIKA, ALA., Feb. 20, 1890. COUIS CHERRY, E.G.:

DEAR SIR—It gives me pleasure to testify to the merits of the Opelika Mineral Water. For three years I had blood poison and rheumatism. My hands were almost a solid sore from impure blood. Dr. Lupton, the State Chemist, who ana-lyzed this water, told me it was the best medicinal water he ever analyzed. If this testimonial can be of use to you, you can use it. I am seventy-four years old, and this water is the best blood purifier I ever saw. It will give you an appetite when everything else fails.

THE ALLIANCE IN NORTH CARCLESA-

The Demands Which It Has Made on the Legislature.

Legislature.

RALEIGH, N. C., June 11.—[Special.]—The Farmers' alliance of this state has taken a departure. At its annual state meeting in August last, it made the following demands:

"With full confidence in the correctness of our position, we demand of the legislature of North Carolina the enactment of a railroad commission law with full powers to regulate freight and passenger rates, and to investigate and take action with respect to damages or injuries to persons or property. We enter an earnest protest againsthe policy of giving away the labor of our convicts, and demand of our legislature the enactment of such laws as will hereafter prevent this outrage on the rights of the tax-payers of out state. We demand such changes in our laws as will reduce the cost in litigation in minor causes, and enlarge the furladiction omagistrates. We demand that laws shall be enacted to prohibit our public officials from receiving or using free passes or tickets on our railroads."

The official announcement is made today by Elias Carr. president of the state alli-roads."

The official announcement is made today by Elias Carr, president of the state alliance, that these resolutions having been submitted to and ratified by the requisite majority of the subordinate alliances, are the demands of the alliance. The alliance is now the greatest political factor ever known in North Carolina.

GREAT DANGER.

They Should Be Avoided-A Few Points in Regard to Them.

When the Creator in His wrath (or for His glory?) saw fit to expel His first creation, His own image, from the garden of Eden, He placed on them the curse of disease and death. In after generations He visited His chosen people with many "plagues for their disobedience," but of all the many ills He indicted upon his fallen creation many "plagues for their disobedience," but of all the many fils He inflicted-upon his fallen creation none are more painful, more loathsome, or more errible in its effects than fistula in ano; fearful in its ravages and dangerous to life, robbing one of all the pleasures of living. But, as in all other afflictions, He has given a remedy; science in its primitive state was unable to utilize the remedy without eausing most intense suffering, and oftentimes leaving the victim in a condition much worse than at first. It was left for the progressive physicians of the present age to offer you a pleasant cure for this most unpleasant disease. You need no longer fear the "knife," with all its pain and dangers, for its unnecessary. I have laid aside all harsh means and treat you by a rational treatment tiat when properly applied for a sufficient time will cure you. Have you fistula? If so, it is unnecessary to ask you if you wish to be cured of it. But do you wish to avoid the intense pain of a scere operation, or are you wedded to the old belief that you cannot be cured without the crude and painful means formerly employed? If you are, I have nothing to offer you. If you are not, I offer you the very latest that science can give you. I have carred many by this rational method, and I offer the same to you confidently, promising you satisfactory results. Many iadies are affected with fistula. To all I say, do not let your timidity prevent you from availing yourself of this opportunity to obtain a cure. My arrangement for privacy are all you could wish. Promising to verify all my ciams. Respectfully, Dr. R. G. Jackson.

How to Buy Cigars.

How to Buy Cigars.

Is it more profitable for a retail dealer in cigars to buy from the manufacturer than from the jobber? This is a vital question for every retailer to buy from the manufacturer than from the jobber? This is a vital question for every getaller to consider.

We have saved our customers the jobber's prifit for the last six years. This accounts partly for the steady increase of the demand for our fine Havana cigars which equal in taste, flavor and Spanism workmanship the best imported from Cuba; and they give entire satisfaction, for Atlanta's prominent men have been our steady customers ever since we established our factory.

We sell to the retail trade at wholesale price in quantities of one box and upward. We guarantee our goods and ship them to any place in the country. And we are willing at any time to take the goods back and refund the money if they do not turn out to be as we represent them. The buyer runs, therefore, no risk at all.

There are many smokers who pay high prices for cigars which do not satisfy their taste. Let them call at our factory and get their money's worth, or write to

THE STOCK MARKET.

The Day on the Floor of the New York Stock Exchange.

NEW YORK, June 12.—The stock market showed no improvement in its volume of business today, but a marked change in temper from weak-ness to strength occurred and while the upward movement at no time amounted to a boom, there was, after the first few minutes, a steady appreciation of values, which, in spite of material open-ing declares, had the effect of leaving everything on che list fractionally higher with here and there material advance and cables sent to London last night were, it seems, all of pessimistic tenor as far as the prospects of final agreement on the silver question was concerned and that created a fearish feeling in American securities there, which augment-d by the failure of speculators in American, caused a markep decline in London figures from the figures of last evening. The bears were prepared to take advantage of this state of affairs prepared to take advantage of this state of affairs and a vigorous attack was made upon certain stocks at the opening which in sympathy with London was down from ½ to ½ per cent generally, Oregon Transcontinental was specially week in the absence of its supporters and it was further hammered down to 47½ against 40% last evening. Low prices brought on good buying immediately, however, and the recovery was rapid and complete. News from the west was of the most reasuring wetter and leading, western railread office. suring nature and leading western railroad offi-cials gave it as their opinion that a restoration of rates was imminent. The report about the defection of Grand Trunk was officially denied and Gould was out with a most bullish interview and all this aided in creating a more hopeful feeling and the prospects of a final agreement on the silver bill was deemed favorable and the upward movement made steady, though slow progress throughout the day, with Chicago Gas and other specialties leading. Richmond and West Point, and Reading and Jersey Central were all higher and more active, the first named especially on the general impression that the recent Baltimore and Ohio deal was in the interest of that road or its controllers. The upward movement became more pronounced coward the close on the covering of short contracts put out early in the day and at the close was more active and decidedly strong at the best prices of the day. Final changes, with but a few exceptions, are advances and while most of them are fractions, Richmond and West Point and Jersey Central are up 1½, Chicago Gas 1½, and Sugar 1 per cent. barely steady; sales 28,800 bales.
Nothing doing. Hubbard, Price & Co.'s Circular. YORK, June 12-[Special.]—A further de cline in Liverpool, and consequently lower prices here, is again the record of today's cotton market. The demoralization, however, has been less pronounced, and the weakness in both markets has the appearance of being rather induced than in-herent. Liverpool is about 3-64d lower on the day, while this market at the lowest showed a decline of 12 points on August as compared with yester-day. September has not been so weak, and the distant months have been very steady. The ulti-mate course of prices depends new entirely upon Liverpool. The magnitude of the interest there Inverpool. The magnitude of the interest there in favor of higher prices severely menaces the market. Should the decline be unchecked, and every fraction now taken from the value of cotton there, of course weakens the position of the bulls Ellison's circular, by cable to us today, estimates: Stock of American cotton in Great Britain, including stock in spinners' hands to June 1, 1899. 870,000 bales. Probable import to October 1, 1890, 200,000 bales. Total available to October 1, 1893, J.079,000 bales. Estimated requirements of trade and export to October 1, 1890, 337,000 bales—leaving stock in Great Britain October 1, 1890, 133,000 bales, against at the same date last year 217,000 Of the 133,000 bales thus appearing as the probable stock on October 1, less than 100,000 bales will probable be in Liverpool. These figures naturally should stimulate the market tomorrow, although they omit altogether the probable excess of the East Irklian supply.

HUBBARD, PRICE & Co.

NEW YORK, June 12.—The cotton market showed rapid changes in prices under radical trading and excitement. The opening appeared calm, and then an advance from 1@5 points was made. Indeed, there was quite free buying at troe ger prices. Suddenly, on leading operators switching about to the bear side, all parties between the called the superchange of the switching about to the bear side, all parties became at once active sellers. It was through this period difficult to find buyers. July and August, the two most prominent months, broke under the pressure fully 18 points. There was a reaction from these figures, which brings the market for the months named at the close 3@7 points lower than yesterday. August alone was sold to the extent of 61,600 bales out of the total sales of 132,000 bales. The most peculiar feature was the heavy selling of Hubbard early in the day and his eager buying towards the close. August had been sold at 11.90 and down to 11.73, closing at 11.79@11.80.

Spot cotton was put down ½c, but recovered 1-16c.
